AMBASSADOR HERRICK DIES AT POST IN PARIS AFTER HEART ATTACK

TWO NATIONS MOURN DEATH OF DIPLOMAT

TRAGIC SUDDENNESS SHOCK TO POINCARE

Paris, March 31 (A.P.). — United States Ambassador Myron T. Herrick, who won the heart of the French people by his refusal to leave Paris when other diplomats fled the threatened German invasion in 1914, died peacefully at 4:10 p. m. today. He was 75 years old.

From a humble business career among the farmers of Ohio, he had become governor of that State, was offered Cabinet posts and was selected by two Presidents as Ambassador to France.

Mr. Herrick had not been in robust health for some time but was not seriously ill until 24 hours before his death. A slight bronchial attack, such as those from which he had frequently suffered, caused a heart collapse. His daughter-in-law, Mrs. Parmely Herrick, was with him. His son was in Cleveland, Ohio.

Conscious Until Nearly End.

Conscious until half an hour before he died, the ambassador was cheerful, chatty, and solicitous about engagements ahead. Then he suddenly collapsed. He never rallied from the heart stroke.

Mr. Herrick on Tuesday had walked bareheaded in the Foch funeral cortege from Notre Dame Cathedral to Les Invalides, three hours in damp foggy air relieved by occasional bursts of sunshine. In evening dress he sat through the long service in Notre Dame in the unheated and draughty nave of the cathedral.

The next morning he remarked that he was surprised that he had no cold, but, on the contrary, felt fine. That afternoon he defeated Col. T. Bentley Mott, 3 and 2, in a game of golf at St. Cloud. On Thursday, however, he decided that he would not have his usual round of golf and remained at home. He told one of his callers, "I feel that blankety blank cough again."

Had Bad Night Thursday.

The ambassador had a disturbed night on Thursday. His daughter-in-law telephoned Friday morning for Dr. H. Rabeau, assistant to the regular physician of Dr. Herrick, who was in southern France. The diagnosis of Dr. Rabeau was a bronchial attack and he gave medicine to relieve the spasms of coughing. Desirous of other opinions, he summoned Prof. Vaquez and Dr. P. Ferrey Rolles, two bronchial and lung specialists. One of these three always was at the home thereafter until Mr. Herrick died.

Dr. Ferrey-Rolles this morning informed Mrs. Herrick that the condition of the ambassador was critical. She immediately telephoned her husband in Cleveland, telling him of the serious turn. She previously had informed him by cable of the illness of his father.

Besides Mrs. Herrick, with the ambassador when the end came were Mme Salembier, his private secretary for many years; Bradford, his valet, and Dr. Ferrey-Rolles.

Poincare Greatly Moved.

Col. Mott, who was one of the most intimate friends of Mr. Herrick, immediately called upon Premier Raymond Poincare at his home and told him of their loss. The premier was greatly moved and said, in a shaking voice: "I, as well as France, have lost a great friend. I am so very, very sorry. I had come to love him. I respected his great ability, but, above all, his heart and character."

The premier asked for all details of the illness. Then he said: "Anything that the French government can do, shall be done. Ambassador Herrick's family may ask anything they please and if it is feasible it shall be done."

Col. Mott remarked that he must call at the foreign office. M. Poincare immediately said that he would personally look after the matter and inform all ministers of the government. Col. Mott called at the Elysee Palace and informed President Gaston Doumergue. The president immediately sent Admiral Vedel, of his household, to the American Embassy to convey the condolences of France.

News Spreads Rapidly.

The sad news spread rapidly through Paris. Many notables of the French government and heads of diplomatic missions left their cards at the embassy. Gen. John J. Pershing, who had been in intimate contact with the ambassador in war times, called personally.

Former Ambassador Jusserand was to have dined with Mr. Herrick next Wed-

ESCOBAR MANS GUN AT ESCALON BATTLE

NACO IS AIR RAID SCENE

Juarez, Chihuahua, March 31 (A.P.). In what the official rebel bulletin called the initial battle of the campaign against Mexican federal forces, rebel troops under personal command of Gen. Jose Gonzalo Escobar supreme revolutionary commander, were said to have defeated a large force near Escalon late today.

During the battle Gen. Escobar personally manned a machine gun of the Twenty-fourth Battalion in the front line fighting. Revolutionary forces participating in the battle were the Eleventh, Twenty-fourth and Twenty-seventh battalions.

Federal losses were heavy, the bulletin from revolutionary headquarters said.

Mexico City, March 31 (A. P.).—The federal armies continued offensive operations on two fronts today as the revolution entered its fifth week. On the northern front in the state of Chihuahua the insurgents under Gens. Escobar and Urbalejo had been forced

HUSBAND WHO SLEW PASTOR CONVICTED

JURY OUT FOR 23 HOURS

Tyler, Tex., March 31 (U.P.).—A jury, half of the members said to be Baptists, today summoned Judge J. R. Warren from the First Baptist Church, where he was attending Easter services, and reported it had found Loys Wilson guilty of slaying the Rev. Fount Wallace, Baptist minister, of Troup, Tex.

Wilson, garage owner, who, with his wife, testified he killed the attractive young minister because he made love to his wife, was sentenced to three years in the penitentiary. The verdict, apparently a compromise, was returned after 23 hours and 30 minutes of deliberation. The State had asked the death penalty. The defense held out for a suspended sentence.

Wallace had been in Troup about two years when he met his death in a drug store on April 16, 1928. He was 26 years old. Wilson, 31, owned a garage in Troup, located within a few feet of his modest home there.

Mrs. Mae Wilson, a choir singer in Wallace's church, a Sunday school teacher and acting president of the Women's Missionary Union, spared no detail of her romance with the pastor in testifying for her husband.

The romance began, she testified, when Wallace slipped up behind her and kissed her the first time while she was playing a piano in the church basement.

Wilson's story was that he suspected his wife and the pastor, accused her, and that she confessed. He attempted to borrow her pistol, was refused it, got his own and sought the minister. He found him at the drug store, talking to a group of young women. He warned him: "Brother, prepare to meet your God," and fired. The one shot was fatal. Wilson then drove to Tyler and surrendered.

Michaelson will make bond of $2,000 before United States Commissioner Carl Noble before surrendering to the marshal.

While Jacksonville Government officials are apparently in communication with Michaelson, they refuse to divulge his whereabouts, if known to them. They are positive that Michaelson will appear tomorrow, however. United States Marshal Leo Mack holds a warrant for his arrest under a capias.

DRAB SKY FAILS TO DISCOURAGE EASTER CROWD

CHURCHES ARE FILLED AT SPECIAL SERVICES

PRESIDENT WORSHIPS AT MEETING HOUSE

White House Egg-Rolling Today Will Attract the Children of City.

Marked by the presence of thousands at special religious services for all denominations, by the descent upon the Capital of host of visitors from as far West as the Mississippi, by throngs upon the streets and at the points of interest in the city, by the joyous scrambling of children for eggs left by the rabbit, another Easter has passed into history.

Cloudy, and none too warm, Easter Sunday was not propititious for the display of spring finery which is traditionally associated with the holiday. However, the rain which had been predicted by the Weather Bureau held off during the daylight hours, allowing Washingtonians and their guests the opportunity of going through the program of the day without that discomfort.

Solemnity, and yet splendor, featured the services in the churches of the city as the Day of Resurrection was observed. Two great mass services outdoors were added to the usual church programs, with additional thousands banking themselves in natural amphitheaters to rejoice in the spirit of Easter.

For young and old alike it was a morning of reverence, with duty to the church paramount. Sight seeing, automobile rides, attending theaters and the other amusements of everyday life were forgotten for the moment, as the Capital paused to do homage to the Saviour.

Children Roll Eggs Today.

The celebration of Easter will continue today, when thousands of children will gather on the south lawn of the White House to indulge in the annual sport of egg rolling. President and Mrs. Hoover have indicated that they will take time off from their official duties to watch the boys and girls at play.

While 30,000 children attended the egg rolling at the White House a year ago, that number may be reduced today, for the official weather forecast is showers, which may interfere with the program for which the boys and girls have been waiting.

However, it will be warmer, the weather man says, and this fact may bring out an even larger crowd despite the prospect of a damp day.

It is estimated that 1,000,000 eggs will be used in the rolling contests in various portions of the city, which at 40 cents per dozen runs into some $33,333 for the day's sport in Washington.

Activities on the White House lawn will be broadcast over a Nation-wide hook-up for the first time, while music played during the afternoon by the United States Marine Band will also be put on the air.

Outdoor Services Are Held.

Early morning observances of Easter drew huge crowds to Walter Reed Hospital and Temple Heights where outdoor services offered a spectacle which few of the visitors had ever witnessed before. Particularly colorful was the gathering at the hospital where the uniforms of nurses, attendants and of the men in service lent a touch of the military to the scene. Col. Edmund P. Easterbrook, chief of chaplains, United States Army, delivered the sermon.

Under the auspices of the Washington Federation of Churches, the sunrise services at Temple Heights attracted another mighty gathering. Huston Thompson, former Federal Trade Commissioner, spoke, and Dr. Cloyd Heck Marvin, president of George Washington University, presided.

10,000 Visit Cathedral.

Seven services at the Washington Cathedral brought more than 10,000 persons to various parts of the great edifice. Holy Communion was celebrated at 7:30 in the morning, which was followed by almost hourly worship until late afternoon. Easter musical programs by the cathedral choir of men and boys featured both morning and afternoon services in the Bethlehem Chapel.

In the churches of the Capital, altars were banked with spring flowers which with the corsages worn by many of the women in the congregations, offered a symphony of color in contrast to the black and white in the attire of the clergy.

All day long an endless stream of humanity poured past the cherry blossoms around the Tidal Basin. Nor were neglected the Capitol, the Washington Monument, the White House

MAN AND TWO WOMEN SEIZED IN GREEN GABLES DEATH RAID; ALL DENY THEY KNOW KILLER

DISCLAIM ANY PART IN SHOOTING AFFAIR

Cafe Owner Said to Have Been on Scene When Men Were Shot.

POLICE BROADCAST LOOK-OUT FOR PAIR

State's Attorney May Charge Capital City Trio With Being Accessories.

A man and two women were turned over to Maryland authorities by Washington police yesterday for questioning in connection with the Green Gables murder. The prisoners were captured in a series of raids by headquarters detectives, in their search for Washington's racketeers and the Green Gables murderers.

Those turned over to the Maryland authorities are Emilio Torre, 42 years old, proprietor of the La Tosca Cafe at 504 Ninth street northwest; Lucille Grisson, 27-year-old manicurist, of apartment 24, 1416 E street northwest, and Evelyn Medcalf, alias Evelyn Austin, 24 years old, of apartment 4, 2303 Fourteenth street northwest. They are being held for investigation and will be questioned today.

Deny Knowing Killers.

James Frank Mangum, 32 years old, a chauffeur, who was taken into custody when police raided the apartment of Lucille Grisson, is being held at the Third Precinct for investigation.

Torre and the two women were grilled for several hours last night at the Marlboro Jail by Lieut. Edward Kelley, chief of the local homicide squad, and Detective Sergt. Joseph V. Idron, but all of them stuck to their original story that they do not know the identity of the Green Gables' murderers, and reiterated their original statement that they had no connection with the crime.

Following the grilling, State's Attorney J. Frank Parran, of Prince Georges County, Md., said he would request today that charges of being an accessory after the fact to murder be placed against the prisoners and that they be held without bond.

Admitted Being Present.

Torre, police said, admitted he was present at the fatal shooting of Wesley Poutra and the serious wounding of Joe Hauser at the Green Gables roadhouse at 3 o'clock in the morning of March 20 last.

Police said they were told that the two women prisoners were present too, during the shooting, but the women denied they knew anything about the gun battle.

The headquarters raiding squadron, consisting of Lieut. Edward Kelly and Detective Sergts. Thomas Sweeney, Joseph Waldron, John Fowler and George Darnall, arrested Torre in his cafe at 3 o'clock yesterday morning. The raids of the apartments of the two women followed.

The prisoners were charged with being fugitives from justice and were grilled for several hours. They were turned over to the Maryland authorities at 1:30 o'clock yesterday afternoon and taken to the Marlboro, Md., Jail.

Philadelphia Men Sought.

Washington police yesterday sent a general lookout to police in several Eastern cities for the two Philadelphia racketeers, known only as "Al" and "Chink," who attempted to extort $5,000 from the proprietors of the Mount Pleasant Supply Co., and for two women and two men named in warrants charging assault with intent to kill in connection with the Green Gables murder.

50,000 HERE EASTER SWELL CITY TRAFFIC

2 WOMEN SLIGHTLY HURT

Coming from all points of the compass, more than 50,000 visitors swelled the numbers of Washingtonians who viewed the cherry blossoms on the Tidal Basin drive Easter Sunday. More than 125,000 persons strolled or rode around the basin, revelling in the beauty of the blossoms from the land of the Mikado.

Visitors arrived by every means of transportation—trains, buses, automobiles, motorcycles, bicycles, airplanes and hitch-hiking, adding to the heavy traffic of Washington. According to police, about everything on wheels that would roll, sallied forth early in the morning and remained touring until nearly 6 o'clock, reaching a peak of heavy traffic between 2 and 4 in the afternoon.

Added to the rolling traffic, from the lowliest rattler of ancient vintage to the statliest of limousines, were tens of thousands of pedestrians—men, women and children, all dressed in their finest despite the threat of lowering clouds. Apparently everybody in Washington was on the streets.

Despite the swollen streams of traffic no serious accidents were reported by the Police Department, and, according to traffic policemen the increase over normal Sunday traffic varied in different arterial streets from 25 to 100 per cent and was handled without any snarls of consequence.

Traffic around the Tidal Basin, perhaps the heaviest by far in any part of the city, and estimated to have been heavier Sunday than during any other Easter Sunday, flowed one way only.

The main line entered the Tidal Basin drive at Seventeenth and B streets northwest and continued to the right around the drive. Other autos entered the drive from the Washington Monument and Fourteenth and Water streets.

While some 50 park policemen kept the sightseers in constant flow, airplanes droned overhead, approximately 800 people seeing from the air the ring of tinting pink blossoms bordering the basin.

Others desiring to see the beautiful panorama from the air, rode or walked to the top of the Washington Monument. A check showed that 3,740 persons entered the monument during the day.

What police termed an "unprecedented crowd" was a cosmopolitan, metropolitan and democratic throng, gay in colors, laughter and banter.

College students and school boys and girls, filling buses from out of town to overflowing, went their merry way through the streets, admiring, cheering and expressing admiration for all they saw in the Capital City.

Automobiles from every State in the Union, and some from Canada, were in the city, according to traffic police.

Although figures are only approximate, it was estimated that more than 40,000 people came to Washington by train alone during Saturday night and Easter Sunday, doubling the usual week-end influx.

B. R. Swain, extra assistant station master of Union Station, said that 77 regular trains brought large quotas and that twelve extra trains, principally from New York, Philadelphia, Pittsburgh and Cleveland, emptied their sightseers into the city during the day.

Only one serious tie-up of traffic was threatened. A "human fly" climbing the Investment Building at Fifteenth and K streets northwest drew a crowd,

Southern Cross Lands in Jungle

Sydney, N. S. W., March 31 (U.P.).—The cross-Pacific monoplane Southern Cross, carrying Capt. Charles E. Kingsford-Smith, Capt. Charles T. P. Ulm and two companions was forced down today in one of the wildest parts of northern Australia.

The plane left Richmond airdrome on Saturday at 10:48 a. m. for a flight of 1,860 miles to Wyndham, on the north coast. Kingsford-Smith and Ulm were accompanied by H. A. Litchfield, navigator, and T. H. McWilliams, radio operator.

The plane ran into fog. As the gasoline and oil were low, the fliers came down at the Drysdale Mission Station, 20 miles west of the Drysdale River. Arrangements were made to send fuel from Wyndham by launch, and it was expected the Southern Cross would be able to resume its flight by Wednesday.

Muskogee, Okla., March 31 (A.P.).—John D. Rockefeller, 17, Muskogee High School athlete and a third cousin of the oil multimillionaire, gave his life that a friend might survive a boating mishap near here today.

Rockefeller and Dale Decamp were thrown into the swollen Arkansas River when their motorboat overturned in midstream. The boat sank immediately, and an empty 5-gallon can was the only thing to which they might cling for support.

They swam to the can, but it did not have sufficient buoyancy to support both. Apparently realizing that Decamp could not swim because of heavy boots he was wearing, Rockefeller relinquished the can to his companion and started swimming for shore. But he was unable to make progress against a swift current and was carried rapidly downstream. He sank before persons who saw the mishap could reach him in a row boat.

Decamp was rescued after he had floated more than a mile downstream.

Morgan Offered Legal Aid By Fighters of Jones Law

Brooklyn Lawyers' Committee Sees Justice in Prosecution of Representative, But Will Defend Him Free; New York Group Refuses to Assist in Case.

New York, March 31 (N.Y.W.N.S.).—While the lawyers' committee in New York, headed by Frederick R. Coudert, Jr., and consisting of several former assistant United States attorneys, organized for the purpose of defending liquor law violators prosecuted under the Jones "five-and-ten" law, has announced in advance its refusal to defend Representative Morgan, should he be prosecuted under the law for which he voted, a similar committee of lawyers in Brooklyn announced today it would come to his defense.

"The author of the Jones law should suffer the consequences of the Jones law if he himself has violated it. Representative Morgan, of Ohio, bone-dry Republican, who is accused by the customs officials of bringing four bottles of liquor on the Cristobal Monday, should be tried like any other offender.

"But if he wants counsel, the Brooklyn lawyers' committee for the defense of persons arrested for Jones law violation is ready to offer its services free.

"This is as it should be. We should like to defend Mr. Morgan from the very law he helped pass."

o'clock the night preceding the shooting and went to the Green Gables roadhouse in company with three persons whom he said he did not know.

The story of the shooting, as obtained thus far by police, is that Torre and his companions, together with Poutra, Hauser and Louis P. Behrens, known as "John Bunny," were seated at three tables in the roadhouse when Behrens was called outside by one of those present and accused of trying to steal another man's woman.

General Melee Ensues.

Behrens denied the accusation and shook hands with his accuser. A few minutes after he had returned to his table, Behrens was struck over the head with a bottle and a pistol.

A general melee ensued, in which more than a dozen shots were fired. Those who were able to leave, fled the roadhouse, many leaving their coats, hats and other personal effects behind in the mad scramble for the doors.

Behrens was taken into custody when he went to Emergency Hospital for treatment. He was returned to Maryland authorities and released under $500 bond as a material witness.

Prison Spying Hit By Snook, Retiring

Writes Attorney General, Urging the Abolition of Snooping Policy.

Atlanta, March 31 (A.P.).—Closing his tenure as warden of the Atlanta Federal Penitentiary today, John W. Snook, in a letter to Attorney General Mitchell, defended his administration and expressed the hope that "you will abolish" the practice of planting Department of Justice agents in the prison.

In his letter replying to a telegram from the Attorney General reprimanding him for permitting newspaper men to make an inspection of the prison and write a story of conditions they found, the warden said: "I have read the article referred to, and the facts contained therein were secured from the annual report of all Federal institutions published by the Department of Justice."

The warden said that the newspaper men had appeared at the prison to inform him of charges made by Mrs. Mabel Walker Willebrandt that the prison "was reeking with dirt, disease and dope" and requested permission to inspect it for themselves. The warden said permission was given and they were shown through as any other visitors by one of the officers and "after their tour of inspection reported to me that this was one of the best, and best kept, institutions of its kind they had ever visited."

Newspaper Claims 5 Men Robbed Club

Alleged Gambling Palace in St. Louis Is Scene; Denied by Police.

St. Louis, March 31 (A.P.).—The Globe-Democrat tomorrow will say that the Business Men's Club, an alleged gambling house on fashionable Lindell Boulevard, which has been raided six times since the first of the year, was invaded early today by five masked men who lined up 50 "members" and robbed them of cash and jewelry amounting to about $35,000.

No report was made to the police, according to the newspaper, which adds that "authoritative sources placed the loss as high as $40,000." Officers at the Newstead District police station, a few blocks away from the club, declared they were unaware a holdup had occurred.

"Recreation" as the officers of the club call it, was in full swing," the paper says, "when the first of the five men entered the place and fired a pistol shot, halting all activity in the 14-room residence. 'There,' shouted a hold-up man, 'try to get an injunction to stop that.'" The club was recently denied an injunction to prevent the police from "raiding without cause."

24 Die, 25 Injured In Belgian Blasts

New Explosions Handicap Work of Rescuers at Winterslag Mine.

Brussels, Belgium, March 31 (A.P.).—Fresh explosions from time to time today hampered rescue workers who already had removed 24 dead and 25 injured miners from the Winterslag Coal Miner, near Hasselt, Limburg. The first explosion occured last night at a depth of 2,000 feet.

Not all of the miners had been brought up this evening and rescue parties were continuing their efforts. It was feared that several of those injured would die. Some of the bodies were so mutilated that they could be identified only by the metal discs which each of the men wore.

TWO BROTHERHOODS ASK FOR 6-HOUR DAY

PLAN SERIES OF PARLEYS

Boston, March 31 (A.P.).—A Nation-wide campaign for a six-hour day to combat unemployment was launched here today by the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen and its companion organization, the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Enginemen.

Simultaneous meetings of New England members of both brotherhoods were held in the American House and in Faneuil Hall, where thirteen years ago the drive for the present eight-hour day for railroad employes began.

Samuel E. Winslow, chairman of the United States Board of Mediation, came here to address the engineers and firemen, but after he had spoken of the success of his board "in keeping labor troubles out of sight and in preventing them," Timothy Shea, assistant president of the engineers, said, "We must go to Congress for a bill of rights to protect men who are being cast into the junk heap.

"In 1927, the best year the railroads ever had," Shea continued, "the number of operating employes on the roads of this country numbered less than 1,700,000, while in 1920, the previous peak year of history, more than 2,000,000 men were required. With plans under contemplation which will mean the combining of 1,700 railroads under the control of the Interstate Commerce Commission into 18 or 20 big systems, it means that this brotherhood alone will have at least 20,000 more men out of jobs.

"Neither the railroad labor act nor any other legislation can prevent the railroad men of this country from walking out on strike to get justice. The act is a good thing and will prevent trouble, but when the railroads refuse to participate in the proceedings before the regional boards, others methods of settling disputes will have to be put into effect."

The trainmen were addressed by their president, Alexander F. Whitney, of Cleveland, who said, "I do not believe the inventor of labor-saving machinery should reap all the returns from his invention, but only a share, so that the employer and employe, especially the latter, who has been hardest hit, may share in the increased production through higher wages and shorter working hours."

A series of regional meetings in New England and all other parts of the country were planned by both organizations as part of their campaign. Whitney said that the union would call upon employers to maintain the present basic wage in granting the six-hour day.

Tree Crash Fatal To Auto Passenger

Losing control of an automobile and sideswiping a tree caused the death of an occupant of the car, Henry Long, colored, 31 years old, of 520 Morton street northeast, on the dirt road between Woodmere and Leeland, Md. yesterday afternoon, according to report of the Maryland authorities. Hudson Long, brother of the victim, and of the same address, driver, was held by the Maryland authorities for the grand jury following an inquest.

Two other occupants of the car were unhurt. They were James Long, also of 520 Morton street northeast, and John Hicks, of 732 Lamont street northeast.

According to the information given the authorities, Hudson Long had just passed an intersection when the car ran wild and struck the tree. Medical examination determined that Henry Long's skull and neck were broken.

Two Men Are Slain By Auto Assassins

Gunmen Pour Volley Into Car as Their Sedan Sweeps Past.

Wilsonville, Ills., March 31 (A.P.).—Two men were shot and killed on the outskirts of Wilsonville early this afternoon by an automobile load of men who sped away before townspeople could obtain the license number.

The victims, who died almost instantly, were Frank ("Curley") Hines and Smith Tucker, miners, and the motive is believed to have been a gangster fued.

Hines and Tucker were driving into town from Gillespie, where they live, when a "big blue sedan" roared up from behind them. A volley of shots sounded and Tucker, who was driving the car, slumped at the wheel. Hines tried to get out of the car, drawing his revolver, but fell on the running board and died. The only witnesses, three school boys, said there were three or four men in the death car.

Chicago, Near Bankruptcy, May Soon Be In Bank Hands

$40,000,000 Syndicate Formed to Take Charge of City Finances, Insists Upon Elimination of Wasteful Methods of Administration.

Chicago, March 31 (N.Y.W.N.S.).—Chicago's municipal administration, facing bankruptcy, soon may be in the hands of a syndicate of New York and Chicago bankers. They will be the bosses of "Big Bill" Thompson and his executives if the plan goes through. The bankers insist that waste, as they call it, must be eliminated if the city is to get the loans it needs.

New York bankers, who took $15,000,000 tax warrants at 5½ per cent, were asked to take millions more. They learned so much about waste, extravagance and alleged illegal expenditures of public funds that they hesitated.

Then New York and Chicago bankers had a conference and organized a $40,000,000 syndicate. They have agreed to buy tax anticipation warrants at the rate of $3,333,333 a month for corporate purposes, and a like amount for school needs. And the months of such buying are said to be limited to six. That means a total of $20,000,000 for the corporate fund and another $20,000,000 for the schools.

Silas H. Strawn, attorney for the bankers, explained that the bankers would wish to place their agents in the controller's office and several other offices, and would require that they have ready access not only to all records with reference to expenditures, but also to all documents that concerned contemplated spending.

The school board representative has been objecting to the arrangement, it is understood, because he has contended that the schools require $3,850,000 a month for their pay rolls alone. Corporation Counsel Ettleson is expected to indorse the arrangement, if he is unable to improve upon it.

The county is "busted" too, and it proposes to have the legislature, by emergency action, legalize one-year bonds without a referendum to take the place of tax anticipation warrants

Winslow Is Silent As to Resignation

Inquirers Referred to His Counsel by Judge; May Issue Statement.

New York, March 31 (N.Y.W.N.S.).—Federal Judge Francis A. Winslow, declared on competent authority to have resigned in the face of a congressional inquiry, refused today to deny or confirm the fact. He referred all questions to his attorney, Martin F. Conboy.

Mr. Conboy refused to make any comment, but from Judge Winslow it was learned a statement probably will be forthcoming tomorrow from his attorney. His reported withdrawal from the bench was said to be based on the ground his usefulness as a judge has been destroyed by the charges against him. He also is said to have protested against the action of the grand jury which censured him for "indiscretion."

On official confirmation of his resignation, which is said to have been sent to President Hoover, Myer Kaplan, of Brooklyn, who served eighteen months in the Federal prison at Atlanta, said today he will file a joint $1,000,000 damage suit against Judge Winslow, Marcus Helfand, attorney, recently disbarred from Federal practice, and George A. Daly, Federal court probation officer. He will charge the three conspired to deprive him of his liberty without just cause and due process of law.

Conference for Today Called in Mill Strike

Greenville, S. C., March 31 (A.P.).—Typical Easter quiet reigned today in communities of the Brandon and Poinsett Mills here, operatives of which walked out last week demanding reinstatement of work and pay schedules in effect before inauguration of the "stretch-over" system some months ago. Both sides apparently were awaiting meetings scheduled between strike committees and mill officials tomorrow morning and afternoon.

Brandon controversies will be talked over tomorrow morning at 10 o'clock and the Poinsett trouble at 3 o'clock in the afternoon. Charles G. Wood, United States commissioner, conciliation service, Department of Labor, who was instrumental in arranging the meetings, will attend both. Around 1,750 persons are involved in the strikes.

Christian Will Not Fight Extradition

Former Broker Is Arrested in Texas on Charge of Misusing Mails.

San Antonio, Tex., March 31 (U.P.).—George R. Christian, former member of the brokerage firm of Day & Heaton, New York, said today he would not fight extradition to Newark, N. J., where he will face a charge of misuse of the mails. He has been imprisoned here since last Monday in default of $5,000 bond.

The former broker said that his brother, Lewis Christian, of Maplewood, N. J., swore out the complaint against him. The brokerage firm went into bankruptcy after his disappearance August 14, 1924.

Christian told United States Commissioner B. M. Siddall, before whom he appeared after his arrest, that he left New York about February 6, and that he had been there most of the time since 1924. He told officers he had been in San Antonio about two weeks. He said New York authorities knew where he was.

$25,000 Offered For Tale of City

New York, March 31 (U.P.).—The largest literary prize of the year—$25,000—awaits the amateur or professional novelist who can "best depict and interpret the life of the modern American city." It was offered today by the Woman's Home Companion magazine for manuscripts to be received at any time during the next year.

"Most of the outstanding American novels of the past ten years have had to do with the soil rather than with the city," said Will Irwin, chairman of the committee of judges appointed to make the award. "But we no longer are chiefly an agricultural people. Americans have become a city people, living under conditions that would have seemed fantastic to their fathers. But no outstanding novelist has arisen to record our city life as, say, Dickens did for the London of his times."

Mexican Chieftain On Border Ousted

Laredo, Tex., March 31 (U.P.).—Upon instructions from Mexico City, Emiliano Yzaguirre, for the past five years commander of the Mexican border patrol and mounted customs inspector along the border from Nuevo Laredo to Matamoros, has been relieved of duty and Francisco Cardenas, of Tampico, named his successor.

It is reported Yzaguirre is charged with having feigned illness since the breaking out of revolutionary troubles in Mexico. It was learned on reliable authority that he actually has been under the care of a physician all that time.

MENINGITIS PLAGUE GROWS IN SHANGHAI

SERUM SUPPLY IS GONE

Shanghai, March 31 (A.P.).—The ravages of cerebro spinal meningitis, long a dreaded disease in the Shanghai area, has become decidedly more serious than at any time in the last decade, health authorities revealed today. The authorities said that the increase in the malady became noticeable about February 1 this year and that since that time there has been a continual influx of patients at hospitals.

Most of those stricken have died. Many deaths were reported today, including nine foreigners. Twenty-five foreigners have contracted the disease.

The situation became more alarming after an investigation at drug stores revealed that the supply of meningitis serum has been exhausted, for the last 48 hours.

Authorities estimate that upward of 1,000 cases are under treatment in this area at present. International settlement officials state that 50 meningitis patients are at the Municipal Isolation Hospital and half of this number are expected to die.

Many cases of the disease have been found on boats carrying passengers from the Philippines to the Pacific coast of America. However, quarantine authorities do not believe these patients contracted the disease in Shanghai.

While data from Chinese localities outside foreign settlements were not available, physicians declared that reports from localities within a radius of 100 miles of Shanghai indicated that the disease had struck hard.

Spengler Unit, No. 12, District of Columbia American Legion Auxiliary, has voted to approve the resolution adopted by the national executive committee in January indorsing the candidacy of Mrs. Lowell F. Hobart for the office of president general of the D. A. R. Mrs. Hobart was the first national president of the American Legion Auxiliary and is at present organizing secretary general of the D. A. R. Announcement of the action was made yesterday.

The unit also has voted a reiterated protest against the establishment of an abattoir "so closely adjacent to Arlington National Cemetery," according to a copy of a letter to the N. Auth Provision Co., 623 D street southwest, of Washington, D. C.

Edwin Perry, 78, Kills Himself by Inhaling Gas

Edwin Perry, 78 years old, of 5311 Illinois avenue northwest, killed himself yesterday morning while members of his family attended Easter services, by inhaling gas through a tube. Coroner J. Ramsay Nevitt issued a certificate of death by suicide.

Perry was found in his bedroom by Miss Anaa F. Davis, who lives at the residence, police said. She smelled gas and investigated, and summoned Dr. J. B. Heinecke, of 5634 Georgia avenue northwest, and Fire Rescue Squad No. 1, but Perry had already died. He had recently been in ill health, and was said to have worried about financial matters.

Kellogg Pact Fight Renewed in Japan

Noted Statesmen Demand Phrase Giving People Power Be Omitted.

Tokyo, March 31 (A.P.).—The long controversy over the phrase "in the name of their respective peoples" in the Kellogg peace pact was renewed today when a group of veteran publicists, including former cabinet members, petitioned the emperor not to ratify the treaty until the phrase was removed or suitable reservations made. The objection is that the phrase violates the fundamental Japanese coception that sovereignty is vested in the monarch and not in the people.

The first objection was made in the Diet, but the session of that body ended on March 25. The petition today was made through regular constitutional channels, but the lord keeper of the privy seal, despite his discretionary powers, was expected because of the prominence of the petitioners to be forced to refer it to the emperor.

Meanwhile, Premier Tanaka is preparing to submit the pact to the privy council, probably within a week.

(United Press.)

Tornado Hits Missouri; Several Believed Hurt

St. Louis, March 31 (A.P.).—A dispatch received here late tonight from a railway operator at Poplar Bluff, Mo. said a tornado struck 2 to 4 miles west of that city tonight.

Several persons were reported taken to hospitals. Highways north were blocked, he said. Telephone communications to Poplar Bluff were impaired.

Pontiff, in Sistine Chapel, Says Mass

Rome, March 31 (U.P.).—Pope Pius observed Easter by celebrating mass in the Sistine Chapel and giving communion to diplomats accredited to the Vatican and other prominent residents of Rome. The feast of the resurrection was observed by the Vatican as a doubly joyous occasion, because of the recent settlement with the Italian government.

New decorative arrangements for papal functions in the Sistine Chapel were used for the first time during today's ceremonies. A pontifical throne, donated by Catholic workmen in honor of the Pope's sacerdotal jubilee was put into use. The tapestry above the altar, which concealed Michel Angelo's Fresco, "The Last Judgment," was removed and replaced by a large crucifix.

Thousands of Easter pilgrims visited Rome and saluted the papal flag in honor of the Vatican-Italian accord.

JOHNSON ARRAIGNS WORLD COURT PLAN

CALLS PROPOSAL ARTLESS

(Associated Press.)

The Root-Hurst formula looking toward United States adherence to the World Court, which was indorsed recently by a committee of jurists meeting at Geneva, was attacked yesterday by Senator Johnson (Republican), California, in a reiteration of his opposition to this Nation joining the international tribunal.

"From newspaper accounts," he said, "Mr. Root took to Europe one thing and brings back something entirely different. In the report written by Sir Cecil Hurst and so enthusiastically agreed to by the Geneva jurists, the United States would join the court, and thereafter, if advisory opinions were sought, in which the United States claimed an interest, a protest might be filed, which, if unavailing and still persisted in, might entitle the United States to withdraw from the court 'without any imputation of unfriendliness or unwillingness to cooperate generally for peace and good will.'

"How naive! The agreement having thus been so kindly made at Geneva for us, there is nothing remaining to be done to solve the vexed question of advisory opinions and the participation of the United States in the court of the league than for the Senate to sign on the dotted line."

The Californian recalled that one of the Senate's reservations to United States adherence was "that the court should not, without the consent of the United States, entertain any request for an advisory opinion touching any disputed question in which the United States has or claims to have an interest."

"If advisory opinions are as vicious as they have been represented to be by the friends of the court and its participants," Mr. Johnson said later; "if the United States in 1926 could not safely join the court unless in advance it were agreed that no request for an advisory opinion in which the United States has or claims an interest should ever be entertained; if the Senate was right in its former conclusion, the present suggested solution is no solution at all. If the United States enters the court induced by the delightfully artless proposal that it may withdraw, after a controversy concerning advisory opinions, it requires no prophetic vision to understand exactly what will result. The expression which has been so persuasive with our people, 'the opinion of the world,' and the insistence of our own internationalists, will keep us in. We'll be a party to all the wrong that has been asserted flows from advisory opinions.

"It will be observed that in Sir Cecil Hurst's reports, so ardently advocated by the Geneva jurists, the question of whether a majority or the whole council should unite in the request for advisory opinions was softly sidestepped. It would seem obvious, therefore, if advisory opinions are so objectionable, we ought not to join the League of Nations court."

MANY VISITORS ADD TO CAPITAL'S TRAFFIC

estimated by police at 20,000. The crowd "bottle-necked" K street, so, to avoid slow motion and a possible tie-up, police of the Third Precinct diverted traffic from K and Fifteenth streets to parallel streets.

Although no serious accidents were reported, two elderly sisters were injured. They were Miss Annie T. Rice, 69 years old, and Miss Emma Rice, 67 years old, both of 2217 Q street northwest. Police said they were knocked down by a taxicab at Florida avenue and R street northwest. Both were treated at Emergency Hospital, the former for a fractured right shoulder, and the latter for lacerations of the scalp. Mose Kent, colored, of 1339 V street northwest, said by police to have been operating the taxi, was arrested by police of the Third Precinct on a charge of reckless driving. He later was released.

FOLEY AND WALKER QUIT TAMMANY ROW

"SURVIVAL" IS IN BALANCE

New York, March 31 (N.Y.W.N.S.).—The so-called "big four" of Tammany Democrats, recently called in by the Tammany district leaders to advise with them on the Tammany leadership muddle, tonight appeared to have dwindled to a "big two"—former Gov. Smith and United States Senator Wagner—with the reported defection of Surrogate James A. Foley.

Judge Foley, who with Mayor Walker were the other members of the original "big four," is to return to the city tomorrow from a week's vacation on Long Island. Those close to Foley stated that he would also pursue a "hands off" policy in the leadership struggle and refuse to take part in the forthcoming deliberations.

Last week Mayor Walker came out into the open and said he would "remain strictly neutral," refusing to give his counsel one way or the other. Foley, on March 22, asserted in a public statement that he would have no part in the selection of a leader. His friends said his position has not changed.

The abandonment of the "Big Four" by Walker and Foley means, in the opinion of the observers, that if the new leader of Tammany Hall is to be other than a district leader, the job of bringing that about, apparently shirked for poltical reasons by Walker and possibly by Foley, must be done, if at all, by Mr. Smith and Senator Wagner.

Those in informed circles said tonight that the fate of the "new Tammany" rested solely on the shoulders of former Gov. Smith and Senator Wagner, two of the strongest men in the New York Democracy. More than one argued that if the successor to Tammany Leader George W. Olvany is one of the present Tammany district leaders, known as the "little fellows," the "new Tammany" is certain to go glimmering.

Mr. Fix is a handy man to do the little odd jobs you've been putting off doing from day to day. You'll find his address and telephone number among today's advertisements in the "Personals" classification of The Post.

FEDERAL BOMBER IS SLAIN; BOTH SIDES AT JUAREZ MOVE

out of the town of Corralitos and were reported to be retreating toward Santa Rosalia, north of Jimenez.

The federal cavalry of the army of Gen. Juan Almazen was close on their heels seeking to force another combat. This cavalry under Gen. Anscleto Lopez last night inflicted casualties upon the rebel rear guard in occupying Corralitos. Headquarters here had not yet received a detailed report of this battle.

On the Pacific coast front the insurgents put up their first determined resistance to the federals at the town of La Cruz, north of Mazatlan. With machine guns on the housetops they yesterday warded off a federal bombing attack from the air. This air raid resulted in the first fatality in the federal air corps in actual combat in the revolution.

Capt. Manuel Robles Monterrubio, an observer in the plane piloted by Lieut. Col. Pablo Sidar, was struck by three bullets and died soon after returning to the federal air base at Mazatlan. All of the federal planes were struck by the rebel bullets but Monterrubio was the only aviator wounded.

Writes His Farewell.

Realizing that he was about to die, Monterrubio scribbled a note to Dolores Segura, a friend of his mother living in Mexico City. He wrote, "Kiss my mother for me; let them give her my pension." Entrusting the note to Col. Sidar for delivery, he slumped unconscious to the floor of the cabin.

The pilot turned the plane back and sped as fast as possible toward Mazatlan but his comrade died a short time after he landed. Capt. Monterrubio was to be buried today with military honors.

Col. Sidar, commander of the federal air squadron on the Pacific Coast, telegraphed the government that "the traitors will pay dearly for the life of our companion," he urged that more planes be sent to them, pointing out that the four airplanes he had brought from Torreon were unsuited to bombing operations. (They are commercial cabin planes.)

Calles Sends Bomber.

Secretary of War Calles met the request by ordering one of the three Corsair bombing planes which recently arrived at Torreon from the United States to be sent immediately to the west coast. He said that three more bombers expected from the United States in about a week will be detailed to duty in the same sector.

A government bulletin today said the Mexican consul at El Paso had informed them that representatives of all the leading rebel generals were planning a meeting there to consider relieving Gen. Gonzalo Escobar of his post as commander in chief of the insurgent forces. It was reported that the other rebel generals were not satisfied with the failure of Escobar to contest the federal advance on Chihuahua City. His failure to defend Monterey, Saltillo, Torreon, or other important northern cities was said to be particularly unsatisfactory to the rebel commanders on the west coast.

Sharp Cavalry Clash.

Corralitos, Chihuahua, Mexico, March 30 (A.P.). (Delayed).—Gen. Juan Almazan's advancing federal army today found the carcasses of horses strewn along the line of the rebels' retreat, indicating that the insurgents are running short of rations.

A short, hard and decisive engagement stood out today in this the most aggressive push made by the northern federal column. Gen. Almazan's cavalry overtook a lagging band of rear guard revolutionaries. In the brief, fierce encounter, near here, nine federals and 50 rebels were killed; six federals and 12 rebels wounded, and 50 rebels captured.

The correspondent, in the vanguard of the government infantry, cavalry, and artillery, totaling 10,000 strong, atop an occasional hill, could see the rebels fleeing with loyal cavalry in hot pursuit.

Bombs Kill Federals.

Naco, Sonora, March 31 (A.P.).—Two Mexican federal soldiers were killed and one injured by bombs dropped during the second air raid by a lone rebel plane on Naco late today. Members of the federal garrison said that one bomb fell almost in the trenches among a group of federal soldiers. They said one soldier was "blown to pieces."

As in the first aerial attack this morning, three bombs were dropped over the side of the airplane, one proving a dud. No one was injured during the morning raid. The second explosion late today was at the Mexican custom house. A part of the bomb fell on the United States side of the international boundary.

The plane appeared over the garrison at an altitude of 4,000 feet. Federal troops opened fire upon it with rifles.

Rebels Claim Advance.

Juarez, Chihuahua, Mexico, March 31 (A.P.).—Revolutionary headquarters reported today that the insurgent cavalry from the Jimenez base were slowly moving southward and had taken possession of the Town of Ceballos, about 20 miles south of Escalon, near the Chihuahua-Durango State line. Gen. Juan Andreu Almazan, federal commander in charge of the government's offensive on Jimenez, has retreated from Escalon, the insurgents reported.

Gen. Escobar, the rebel commander in chief, still was in Jimenez today, and rebel officials declared they had received no word to indicate he had changed his plans to concentrate his forces at Rellano, with outposts working as far south as Ceballos.

The revolutionary announcement said the rebel cavalry was in control of Ceballos. Possession of this town, if true, would indicate the federal army is retreating toward Torreon, as claimed by the rebels.

Reinforcements are being added daily to the insurgent command with the arrival of federal soldiers who have deserted the Callista army, it was announced.

Capture of another federal airplane also was reported from Jimenez. An official bulletin stated a government plane had been shot down two kilometers from Jimenez, and the plane was captured by rebel cavalry. The pilot, Gustavo de Leon, escaped. The plane was damaged only slightly and has been repaired by the insurgents. The revolutionary bulletin also reported interception of a telegram to federal headquarters telling of the loss of an airplane piloted by Alfredo Lesama. The plane was brought down March 29, when it attempted to bomb a rebel camp.

WAR UPON POLITICAL HERESY BY SOVIETS

Moscow Order to Oust All Czarists Means Misery for Many Thousands.

DISLOYAL REDS HUNTED

Moscow, March 31 (U.P.).—The Soviet Union is engaged in a dramatic, often tragic, "house cleaning," which is sweeping tens of thousands out of employment.

The proletarian dictatorship is poking its broom ruthlessly into every corner and cranny where "formers" as they are called here—former czarist officials, landlords, aristocrats, business men—may have found a temporary hiding place, intent upon driving them out and giving their jobs, occasionally their homes also, to worker and peasants.

Members of the prerevolutionary upper classes who have proved themselves 100 per cent loyal to the Soviet regime are spared, especially if they are specialists in any line the government needs. Those who, despite working class origin, have showed themselves tainted with bourgeois ideas or methods are swept out as if they were mere grand dukes.

Every section of the Soviet structure is agitated by this relentless campaign against "socially alien" elements, including the Communist party itself, the complicated governmental apparatus, the cooperatives, trade-unions, schools and universities, even literary and artistic organizations.

Real Reason for Fear.

There is ample reason for panic among those who may be affected. To be "cleaned out" is no slight matter here. It means that one becomes an outlaw, deprived of all social privileges and subjected to merciless economic pressure. It means expulsion from the trade union, and therefore neither work nor the unemployment pittance while out of work. It means enormously higher prices for food, clothes, rent, exclusion of one's children from the schools and universities.

No one here blinks at the fact that great numbers are being driven into misery, despair and worse. It is regarded as a harsh but necessary manuver in the class struggle. Part of the merciless civil war which in the twelfth year of the revolution, is far from ended. It is, in fact, a part of the process of exterminating the remnants of the former upper classes which would not—or could not—adjust themselves to the new society.

There is, of course, a fringe of private enterprise where some of those affected may find a tenuous shelter. They may become street peddlers, kustars (handicraft workers), private teachers, and the like. If they have the acumen and the capital they may even go into business on a small scale. But already unemployment is so large and competition so keen among the "de-classed" persons that such hope is not substantial.

Elections Play Part.

The Soviet elections, by forcing every community, even every single house, to sift out those who are not entitled to vote, have become an important part of the job of "house-cleaning." In Moscow alone some 80,000 have been disfranchised.

The government has recognized the likelihood of errors in weeding out those not entitled to vote and has already restored thousands to their rights. Moreover, every one has a right to appeal. But those who at the end of a year—the limit for appeals—are still on the blacklists of nonvoters become outlaws whose lives at best will be difficult, at worst unbearable. For the entire country, as far as one may judge it from externals, is entirely acquiescent in this war on the "formers." The necessity of eliminating these remainders of the past order is accepted as a natural and inevitable fact, quite beyond dispute. The vacated jobs and vacated homes will go to workers who need them. Extra places in the overcrowded schools will be taken by proletarian and peasant children. The petty tyrants in a hundred thousand offices throughout the union who may lose their posts for "bureaucratic" conduct certainly will find no sympathy among the masses.

The party cleansing now under way aims to expel members who harbor political heresies, left or right, and those whose conduct in their social work or private life is considered unworthy of Communists. At the same time an effort is being made to draw workers and peasants, new proletarian blood, into the ranks of the ruling party.

Despite the great exodus of aristocrats and the abundance of Russian nobles in the European capitals, there seem to be plenty left here. A speaker at the Moscow conference of the party stated, as an example, that 24 per cent of the workers in the commissariat of internal affairs are former aristocrats. "Modpik," a literary society here, another disclosed, harbors 21 princes, 5 counts, 11 barons and many lesser lights.

There will be fewer of them earning a living when the house-cleaning is over.

CHIANG VICTORIOUS IN WUHAN BATTLE

Forces of Anti-Nationalist Leaders Are Preparing to Evacuate Hankow.

50,000 TROOPS ADVANCING

Shanghai, March 31 (A.P.).—Reports from Hankow today were that the Wuhan authorities were preparing to evacuate the city and fall back on the south bank of the Yangtse River. Not only had the vigor of the campaign by President Kai-Shek taken the Wuhan forces by surprise, but it was reported that 50,000 troops under Gen. Feng Hu-Hsiang were advancing upon Hankow from the north.

This threat to their communications was believed to be the immediate reason for the sudden decision of the Wuhan generals to retreat, for their prepared positions to the east of Hwangchow would thus be outflanked. At that point there had been concentrated nearly 60,000 Wuhan soldiers, facing the troops of Chiang Kai-Shek on the north bank of the Yangtse.

The low stage of the river makes it impossible for vessels of more than 3,000 tons to reach Hankow. Foreign naval forces at Hankow are being reinforced but there was noticeable anxiety for the safety of the foreign communities. The situation was expected to develop quickly when the Nationalists commanders learned that their opponents are evacuating Hankow.

Man, 60, Has First Ride In Auto and Swears Off

Trenton, N. J., March 31 (U.P.).—Meyer Pearl was 60 years old recently and always was proud that he had never ridden in a motor car.

Saturday he went on his first auto ride. The machine was driven by Harry Alpert and at the Wilbert crossing it was struck by a Pennsylvania train. The rear end of the car was smashed up, but neither occupant was injured. Pearl contemplates no more automobile rides.

Snowfall Mantles Streets on Easter

Denver, Colo., March 31 (A.P.).—A warm sun smiled on Denver's Easter promenade today, after a sudden storm last night had blanketed the streets under three inches of snow.

The city awoke to find itself mantled in white, but rapidly rising temperature caused the snow to melt rapidly.

Heavy Rains Halt Fires Raging in Jersey Woods

Trenton, N. J., March 31.—With a heavy rainfall yesterday, practically assuring success, more than 700 New Jersey fire wardens ended their three-day fight against forest fires in this State.

The 57 distinct woodland blazes leveled more than 1,500 acres of forest and threatened several houses. Wardens fought the flames with backfires and managed to save much property. Alfred Cinella, a farmer of Holly road; his wife and an infant child were saved by wardens, who met them groping their way through the woods to escape the flames.

HOOVER SADDENED BY DEATH OF envoy

QUESTION OF SUCCESSOR

(Associated Press.)

Expressing his grief "for the passing of a splendid public servant," President Hoover yesterday paid high tribute to Myron T. Herrick, whose death, he said, would cause sorrow both at home and abroad.

"I heard with profound regret of the death of Myron T. Herrick, our ambassador in Paris," said the President's statement. "Few men in American public life have given, during many years, such unselfish and such valuable service to their country. From 1903 to 1906 Mr. Herrick served most successfully as Governor of Ohio. He was appointed Ambassador to France in February, 1912, serving until November, 1914. During the first year of the war he won the admiration and affection of France by remaining at his post in Paris when the government and the diplomatic corps moved to Bordeaux. He was reappointed ambassador in April, 1921, since which time he has been an admirable representative of his country."

"The French loved him for his sympathetic understanding," Mr. Hoover continued, "but realized that during his long service in Paris he never lost any of his love for his own country and therefore never failed in his representative capacity. I grieve the death of a man and for the passing of a splendid public servant."

On behalf of himself and Mrs. Hoover the President earlier had telegraphed an expression of sympathy to Parmely Herrick, son of the dead diplomat, at Cleveland.

Secretary Stimson's Tribute.

Secretary of State Stimson, who was in New York, expressed his regret at the death of Mr. Herrick in a formal statement given out at the State Department. Noting that he had known Mr. Herrick well for many years, the Secretary said:

"As American Ambassador to France during the early days of the war his courage and his sympathy, his particular service both to his own country and to France, and the fact that he remained in Paris during the critical days of the defense of the Marne gained for him the admiration of both countries. Thus, in an outstanding manner, he fulfilled the duty and realized the opportunity of an ambassador. In his death the Department of State has lost one of its most faithful and most distinguished officers."

William R. Castle, jr., Assistant Secretary of State, who had known Mr. Herrick for more than 20 years, said he was an "intimate friend" and for that reason his death "brings such personal sorrow that I can not think of him only as a great ambassador."

"He was that, however," Mr. Castle continued, "because he gained the affection and confidence of France without giving up a single trait of his sound Americanism. In his death the Government has lost one of its most faithful and courageous representatives. But with his other friends I shall always remember him primarily as a wise and affectionate counselor, a man to whom one could open one's heart with the certainty of full and helpful understanding. His character as a man was as notable as his success as a servant of his Government."

Speculation on Successor.

Word of Mr. Herrick's death came at a time when it was difficult to reach high officials, and such speculation as to his successor as was obtainable was very informal. There was no prospect that President Hoover would take that question up for a day or so.

There has been no indication that Mr. Herrick would be recalled by the new administration from the Paris post he has held, altogether, for eleven years, unless it was at his own request. The ambassador had given no inkling of any intention to request relief, for a year or two at any rate, and it had been confidently expected that he would remain in Paris, where his career has been unique. His popularity, both in French government circles and with the people of France, had been demonstrated over and over again during his long service.

Whether Mr. Herrick would have cared to remain on active diplomatic duty more than a short time is regarded as doubtful by informed officials here. His advanced years and poor health might have made him look forward with hesitation to the difficult problems of relations between France and the United States which would have fallen to his lot to handle in the next year or two.

Because of those problems, President Hoover and Secretary Stimson may be expected to give very careful consideration to selection of a successor to the man who endeared himself to both the French and American peoples in 1914 by the cool judgment and physical courage he showed as the first German rush toward Paris gained its height. Handling not only the trying business of relieving the distress of Americans stranded in France and elsewhere on the continent by the war, but also the diplomatic interests at Paris of both allied and central powers after the French government and the Diplomatic Corps fled to Bordeaux, Mr. Herrick was about the only diplomat to refuse to Appreciated by Wilson.

The Ohioan was a holdover in 1914 from the Taft administration, President Wilson having been unable to send over a successor before the outbreak of the European war in August of that year. It was not until late in 1914 that William G. Sharp, also of Ohio, relieved him.

At that time President Wilson wrote Herrick, expressing regret that the Government was to lose his services and "my sincere appreciation of the diligence and intelligence with which you have performed the very difficult and delicate tasks" imposed upon the American Ambassador in the war year.

Herrick went back to Paris when President Harding took office and remained there under President Coolidge, thus handling virtually all of the post-war problems with France and also the initiation of the Briand-Kellogg universal antiwar treaty. He was the only American diplomat of the noncareer, political group to have held office for anything like the period his experience at the French capital covered.

Several outstanding problems of relations with France will face Mr. Herrick's successor from the outset. Ground work must be laid not with France alone, but with England, Italy and Japan as well, for the first conference for revision of the Washington naval limitations treaty in 1932. There also are pending settlement of France's war debts to the United States and the question of regularization of commercial relations, now covered by a modus vivendi arrangement worked out at the time of the clash over proposed new French tariff schedules.

Gibson May Be Considered.

Among men certain to be considered as successor to Herrick, Ambassador Hugh L. Gibson, a personal friend of President Hoover, is prominently mentioned. His friends here doubt that he would accept. The Paris post, because of the great numbers of Americans annually visiting that city, has always been a source of expense to the Ambassador far out of proportion to his salary and Gibson is not a man of private fortune. He is understood to have declined appointment as Undersecretary of State several times because of that fact.

Suggestion is also made that Charles G. Dawes, former Vice President, might be considered for the Paris assignment rather than London, now that the former is vacant. President Hoover has been anxious that Dawes accept that London job but the general's decision is not known as yet. He is known in both London and Paris, but as most of his war time work was done in the French capital there might be reason for tendering him now either the Paris or London assignments.

Ambassador Henry P. Fletcher at Rome also is considered as a possible selection for Paris. He made a deep impression on President Hoover during the Latin-American goodwill trip preceding Mr. Hoover's inauguration. Fletcher is known to have desired at one time a transfer to either Paris or London if the opportunity came, but there have been indications that Mr. Hoover would prefer to use him in connection with plans for Latin-American rapprochement.

Kellogg Also Is Suggested.

One other name for the Paris post came into the first speculation to follow on word of Mr. Merrick's death, that of former Secretary Kellogg, now en route to Paris for a relaxation following his release from duty at the State Department last week by Secretary Stimson. Whether Mr. Kellogg would consider returning immediately to active public life is not known, although those who came in touch with him at the State Department are confident he does not feel the weight of his more than 70 years very heavily and is far from looking on himself as ready for the shelf.

The suggestion of Mr. Kellogg's name was prompted by the fact that if Gen. Dawes accepted the London assignment, President Hoover would certainly be anxious to name a man of equal distinction to the Paris vacancy for obvious reasons. Mr. Kellogg would be peculiarly suitable from that point of view and also because of his joint labors with Foreign Minister Briand in negotiating the antiwar treaty as a Franco-American contribution to the case of world peace.

Paris Incidents Reveal Love Felt for Herrick

Paris, March 31 (A.P.).—The love and fondness in which United States Ambassador Myron T. Herrick was held by the French nation, from the president to the humblest citizen, was shown by two incidents this evening.

President Gaston Domergue, not satisfied with sending one representative to present the condolences of France at the American Embassy, entrusted the expression to Admiral Vedel, Gen. Lasson and Jules Michel, chief of his civil cabinet, so that all elements of French official life might be represented.

A waiter, serving coffee to the Associated Press correspondent this evening, said, "Your ambassador is dead; it is too bad. He was a great friend." The pretty young cashier, perched on her high stool, chimed in, "He was a really great man and a true friend of our country."

COOLIDGE MOURNS DIPLOMAT AS FRIEND

Declares Passing Removes Important International Landmark.

OTHERS VOICE TRIBUTES

Northampton, Mass., March 31 (A.P.). Former President Calvin Coolidge today expressed sorrow at the death of Ambassador Myron T. Herrick, who, he said, he would miss "not only because he was a public servant of distinction, but because he was my friend."

"It is a great shock to hear of the passing of Ambassador Herrick," President Coolidge said. "Since coming home here I have had a letter from him. He has been our representative in Paris for many years, where he was very much loved and respected. His service had not only been long, but had been preeminent in its usefulness to both the United States and France. He had a most pleasing personality in addition to great ability. His going will remove an important international landmark. I shall miss him not only because he was a public servant of distinction, but because he was my friend."

Cleveland, March 31 (A.P.).—Newton D. Baker, former Secretary of War, today said that the death of Ambassador Myron T. Herrick, his personal friend, was a "great public loss."

"He lived a distinguished life, and undoubtedly will be mourned as deeply in France as here," Baker said. "He was my personal friend. I personally deeply grieve his death."

Tribute from Hughes.

New York, March 31 (A.P.).—Tributes to Ambassador Myron T. Herrick, who died suddenly today in Paris, eulogized his service to the United States as its Ambassador to France, and pointed out that he had won not only the confidence, but the hearts of the French people.

Charles Evans Hughes, former Secretary of State, said that "Ambassador Herrick has rendered services of incalculable value to the country."

Educators Voice Praise.

Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler, president of Columbia University:

"Ambassador Herrick was a very dear friend of mine for many years. I am greatly distressed. No man has more completely, more honorably and more successfully represented our Government abroad in my lifetime. He has performed a service the value and extent of which can not be realized by the people of the United States."

Chancellor Elmer Ellsworth Brown, of New York University:

"For the last seventeen years Mr. Herrick, twice as ambassador, and during the interim in other close relationships, has been an agent of good will and good understanding between the United States and the French republic. The work he had to do has been done competently, without ostentation. His rare personal qualities have raised it from the plane of mere efficiency to that of genuine international friendship. In the history of diplomatic relations between France and America, the long terms of service of Ambassador Herrick from the one side and Ambassador Jusserand from the other side will stand as a ground of pride and gratification to both republics. These two men, as unlike as possible in superficial characteristics, labored in one spirit to a common end."

James W. Gerard, former ambassador to Germany:

"No ambassador to France was as popular as he was. He was very popular with the French people who would rather have him than any other person as a representative from this country, and he did much to cement the friendship between the two countries."

SON IS PROSTRATED BY DEATH IN PARIS

CLEVELAND MOURNS LOSS

Cleveland, Ohio, March 31 (A.P.).—Funeral arrangements for Ambassador Myron T. Herrick will not be made by his family until they have learned the wishes of the French and American governments, it was announced today at the home of the statesman's son, Parmley Herrick.

Parmley Herrick was grief-stricken and unable to make a statement.

He probably will not go to Paris, it was said, because he could not sail until next Friday and it was expected arrangements to bring the body home would have been completed by that time. Mr. Herrick arrived here last Friday from Paris in order to be home over the Easter holidays with his son, Parmley, jr., who is attending St. Paul's School at Concord, N. H.

A flood of messages of sympathy, both by telegraph and telephone, were received at Mr. Herrick's home today, but because of their bulk it was decided to send them all to his downtown office and withhold their publication until tomorrow. Among the the telegrams was one from President Hoover.

Told of Illness by Wife.

First word of the approaching death of his father was received by Parmley Herrick about 10 o'clock this morning in a transatlantic telephone message from his wife, who was at the ambassador's bedside. An hour later she telephoned again with the word of his death.

Ambassador Herrick was known in Cleveland as a young lawyer, who, born in a log cabin, gained success at banking and business and later became one of the State's foremost political powers.

Ill in November.

His last visit to his home in Cleveland was in November. At that time he contracted a mild case of influenza which momentarily struck fear for his life into his family and friends, but doggedly shook off the attack and characteristically insisted on rising from bed before his doctor wished it.

He recovered and again sailed for his post at Paris.

On his last previous visit he also became ill, but regained his health and made a trip to California. That was in January, 1928.

In Cleveland, Herrick was interested in a law firm, was a bank director and was a partner in a brokerage business.

Although Herrick's greatest personal triumphs were won abroad, his heart and interests were in Cleveland. On his last visit here, a group of newspaper men went out to hear from him the story of Lindbergh whom he had fathered and guided through a series of ovations and receptions in Paris.

Talked of Cleveland.

Instead Herrick ushered them into his home, and then leaned back in his chair and spoke for three hours of the failings and progress made by Cleveland. When it was late and time came for the interview to end, he mentioned his share in Lindbergh's acclaim only incidentally.

"Some of my friends," he said, "accused me of taking the boy under my wing for my own advancement." He laughed, a merry laugh: "I've done everything in the world I could have done to spoil that young man. I'm getting to be an old man. I won't be here much longer. And now that I can look back on it, nothing makes much difference but the love and affection of one's friends."

News of Ambassador Herrick's death stunned Cleveland. On two occasions friends of Herrick had watched bulletins on his condition and had rejoiced on his return to health.

Had Two Operations.

The first time was in July, 1927, when he underwent two serious operations at the Cleveland clinic. The second was performed a short time before Col. Lindbergh stopped in Cleveland on his transcontinental tour.

The young flier, on that occasion, walked quietly into the hospital room, where he remained several minutes.

It was a pathetic meeting. The ambassador, weakened to a critical degree, only smiled as Lindbergh entered, and said in a low, voice:

"My boy, I'm glad to see you," and then Lindbergh retired. Herrick subsequently recovered.

The last time the city feared for his condition was in January, 1928. Physicians hurried oxygen tanks to his Gates Mills estate when they were alarmed by a sudden illness. He recuperated unexpectedly rapidly, however, from his sickness, diagnosed as a slight attack of influenza. He stubbornly insisted on rising from his bed, and a short time later resumed his post at Paris.

Envoy's Last Thought On Plan to Greet Root

Paris, March 31 (A.P.).—The last thought of Myron T. Herrick was for his work as United States Ambassador. He called to Mme. Salombier, his private secretary, this morning and said: "I feel much better. I will get up tomorrow. I must meet Elihu Root, who is arriving, and I must look after him personally."

Al Smith Promenades On Boardwalk at Shore

Atlantic City, N. J., March 31 (U.P.). Threatening weather diminished the expected size of the throng participating in the annual Easter parade on the boardwalk, but failed to dim the colorful spectacle.

Among the saunterers were former Gov. and Mrs. Alfred E. Smith, of New York, who are vacationing at the Seaview Golf Club at Absecon. The Smiths attended mass at St. Nicholas' Catholic Church here. Hotels reported capacity crowds. A few persons braved a chill breeze and appeared on the beach in bathing attire.

Pinchot's Exploration Ship Under Way at Last

New York, March 31 (N.Y.W.N.S.).—The Mary Pinchot, the brigantine on which former Gov. Pinchot of Pennsylvania, his family and a group of scientists will visit the South Sea Islands, left its Brooklyn dock today on its delayed trip south.

The trim little ship pointed its nose toward the sea Saturday. An hour later it was back at the dock, trouble having developed in the refrigerating system. Repairs were rushed during the night and early this morning the voyage began.

Herrick Was in Front Rank Among American Diplomats

Rose From Obscurity to Become Honored U. S. Envoy Abroad.

Among the modern diplomats who have distinguished themselves in the services of the United States, none has won more universal recognition than Myron T. Herrick.

In the turest sense of the word, Mr. Herrick was a diplomat of rare ability. He began his ambassadorship during the trying period which preceded the great war. After a lapse of seven years he was returned to the post and resumed his duties during the war and at the close of hostilities. Through all that trying time he proved an adept in strengthening the alliance between France and America. He did much to promote cordiality between the two nations.

The epoch-making flight of Charles Lindbergh across the Atlantic gave Mr. Herrick another opportunity to prove his worth. Taking the young aviator into his home the ambassador advised him as to conduct best to follow. He protected him from unwelcome visitors, fathered him as though he were his own son, steered him clear from entangling alliances and was a material factor in the triumphal conclusion of the soul-stirring adventure.

Despite his efforts to keep in the background—for Mr. Herrick innately was a most modest and unassuming individual—the ambassador was brought into the limelight with the young aviator; and Lindbergh was not at all backward in acknowledging the debt he owed to the experience and insight of his adviser.

Was of Humble Origin.

Ambassador Herrick—like so many of Ohio's famous sons—was another example of an American youth who began life amid humble surroundings and rose to associate intimately with the most famous men of his time. He was born in Wellington, a little town not far from Oberlin, on October 9, 1854. As a boy, he worked on the farm and his education was obtained in the country schools and in Oberlin College. Next he attended Ohio Wesleyan, from which he was graduated with honors. They were lean years, those youthful days of Herrick. He worked the farm, and taught school and earned an education.

Upon his arrival in Cleveland, Herrick set himself to the study of law. He was determined to become an attorney and in 1878, after various studies and associations, he was admitted to the bar. His career as a practitioner at the bar promised him a great future. Eight years devoted to legal practice gained him a rapid leadership among the younger lawyers and secured him recognition from the older members. Then, in 1886, he renounced the practice of law to become the secretary and treasurer of the Cleveland Society for Savings.

Herrick displayed as marked an ability for finance as he had for law. He was largely responsible for the success of the new institution during its early years, and in more recent years was president and chairman of its board. He was also a chairman of the board of the Union Carbide & Carbon Co., a director of the New York Life Insurance Co., and in many fields he engaged actively in finance throughout the United States.

It was in 1885 that he first turned his attention to political affairs. In that year, he was elected to the Cleveland city council, where he served for three years. A stalwart Republican, he gained the friendship of the late Mark Hanna and was looked upon as a factor to be considered. From 1888 to 1908 he attended each of the national Republican conventions as a delegate. He was presidential elector from Ohio in 1892, and later served as a member of the Republican State executive committee and the Republican national committee.

Entered Politics Untrammeled.

Then came the most crucial event in his career. The Hanna-McKinley organization tendered Mr. Herrick the nomination as governor of Ohio. Tom L. Johnson was staging one of his spectacular tent campaigns throughout the State in an effort to carry victory for the Democratic party. Always a business man rather than a politician and determined to carry out his plans as he conceived them to be best, Herrick accepted the nomination with the understanding that, if elected, he would enter upon his duties unhampered by pledges or obligations. He was elected governor of Ohio by a plurality of 113,812, the largest vote for governor ever recorded in the history of the Buckeye State up to that time. Warren G. Harding, a promising young politician from down State, was elected lieutenant governor.

Herrick's administration was a marked success. He steered clear of politics, and by his independent methods he made many enemies. He was renominated at the expiration of his term, but was defeated and returned to private life in 1905. Business affairs held his interest until 1912, when he was appointed Ambassador to France for the first time.

Five American universities honored Myron T. Herrick. Ohio Wesleyan, Western Reserve, Columbia, Princeton and Harvard conferred degrees upon him, and the University of Nancy, France, also made him doctor honoris causa in 1921.

He received the Grand Cross of the Legion of Honor from France and he organized the American Relief Clearing House in Paris and the United States, with which his name was associated during the war. His wife, who was Carolyn M. B. Parmely, of Dayton, Ohio, died as a result of war work in September, 1918.

Lindbergh in Tribute To Friend and Mentor

New York, March 31 (A.P.).—Col. Charles A. Lindbergh, the man Ambassador Myron T. Herrick guided through a series of ovations and receptions in Paris at the end of his transatlantic flight in 1927, tonight wired the Associated Press from Santa Barbara, Calif., this tribute to the late ambassador:

"I am deeply grieved at the loss of Ambassador Herrick, who has always been more than a friend to me. I do not believe that an individual ever commanded greater love and respect from the people of two countries."

HEART ATTACK KILLS OHIOAN, LONG AMBASSADOR TO FRANCE

nesday. When informed of his death, he expressed profound sorrow, and said: "No American understood my people better. I am exceedingly sorry."

Mr. Herrick, in talking to the Associated Press correspondent a few days ago as to whether he was likely to remain here as ambassador, said: "I have no claims upon this post. I should be glad to stay if it should turn out that way, but I have nothing to ask. I should enjoy remaining until the debt agreement has been ratified and until a good beginning has been made upon the new United States Building to be erected in Paris."

Became Reminiscent.

The ambassador became reminiscent and talked rather freely about matters to which he attached the most importance during his sojourn in Paris as ambassador.

"I don't know whether you remember," he said, "what I did in regard to farm credits. That was during my first term. I became interested in our farmers having greater facilities for borrowing. I made a study of farm credit systems in France, and particularly in Germany, where they are highly developed. I made a report to the State Department which came to the attention of bankers and officials of farmers' societies. Then I wrote a book upon it.

"I really think that up to that time—sixteen or eighteen years ago—our people had not gone into the question of farm loans very deeply, excepting the old-fashioned mortgages."

Mr. Herrick a few minutes later went on, "then there was my remaining in Paris at the beginning of the war when the French government moved to Bordeaux. Well, this appears to have touched the French very deeply, but I did not think it was doing anything remarkable. I am glad I stayed here, because it seemed to give the French a certain moral support which they have appreciated since that time far beyond any merit of mine."

Did Work Unofficially.

When in 1914 his French friends warned him that he might be killed if he did not go to Bordeaux, Mr. Herrick had replied, "There are times when a dead American Ambassador might be of more servite to you than a live one."

The ambassador personally attached as much importance as adhered to any other act of his career in Paris to having bought the embassy site and building on his own responsibility when the exchange was most favorable. He saved the American Government about $1,000,000.

Mr. Herrick did most of his diplomatic work outside the regular channels. He learned early that if a question was once put down in an official document it passed from bureau to bureau, accumulating controversial elements, so that every stage hampered solution instead of assisting it. For instance, some months ago, an extreme measure for control of imports of oil to France was brought forward by the late Minister of Commerce Bokanowski.

The American Ambassador wrote a private letter to Premier Poincare, marking it "unofficial and personal," setting forth his views. Mr. Herrick said that "as one lawyer to another" he "wanted the premier as a lawyer to give his opinion on the facts as presented." The premier immediately took a personal interest in the subject and modified the proposed legislation to an extent acceptable to Americans.

Received Many Requests.

Mr. Herrick received, as do all ambassadors, many requests from his countrymen to do things for them with the French government. He never protected himself behind the instructions of the State Department or by invoking the regulations of the department. What he usually replied was: "Instead of my asking the foreign office to do what you desire, I think I can show you a better method. Let me give you a letter of introduction to 'so-and-so.' He will, I think, be able to suggest how you may obtain what you want without making this an affair between governments."

The ambassador would then by a private note or telephone message set influences at work which would serve the American enterprise without complicating diplomatic procedure.

Mrs. Parmely Herrick desires to learn the wishes of her husband before making any arrangements for the funeral of his father. Although the French government has not yet made known what honors will be paid, it is certain that the grateful nation will wish to show the world how France feels toward the ambassador.

Herrick's Assistance To Lindbergh Recalled

Paris, March 31 (A.P.).—United States Ambassador Myron T. Herrick, who died here today, always showed finesse in greeting in the name of the United States the many distinguished visitors who came his way. On May 21, 1927, he took under his charge a shy, young American, who had bridged the Atlantic in a single airplane flight.

By his protection and almost fatherly guidance of the young man, who left Long Island almost unknown and landed here as the hero of the world, Ambassador Herrick was generally credited with assisting Col. Charles A. Lindbergh to that place in the hearts of the peoples of all nations that he has since held.

BRANDER MATTHEWS DEAD OF INFLUENZA

Well-Known Author, 77, Held Four Degrees Awarded by Columbia University.

LONG DRAMATIC TEACHER

New York, March 31 (A.P.).—Brander Matthews, author and educator, died today at his home at 337 West Eighty-seventh street, after an illness of more than two years. He was 77 years old. The immediate cause of death was given as influenza, which he contracted a week ago.

Mr. Matthews suffered a stroke of paralysis two and a half years ago, from which he never recovered. He had been in average health through the winter, however, until he contracted influenza.

He is survived by a sister, Miss Florence Matthews, of Paris, France; a grandson, Nelson Macy, jr., and a nephew, P. L. N. Barlow, the latter two of New York City. Mrs. Matthews died several years ago. His only daughter died ten years ago.

James Brander Matthews was born in New Orleans February 21, 1852, and dropped his first name when he started to write. He was graduated from Columbia University in 1871 with the degree of A. B. and later took degrees of LL. B., A. M. and LL. D. from Columbia. He also was awarded honorary degrees from many universities.

He was admitted to the bar in 1873, but later turned to academic pursuits, becoming professor of literature at Columbia, which post he held from 1892 to 1900. From 1900 to 1924 he was professor of dramatic literature, retiring at his own request after 32 years of service.

Mr. Matthews wrote prodigiously both for the stage and of it, and also was the author of many essays, novels and academic treatises.

He was a founder of the Authors and Players Club and during his active career held many official positions in artistic and academic societies.

All Aboard Saved As 2 Ships Collide

Bordeaux, France, March 31 (A.P.).—All passengers of the French liner Ceylan, which was badly damaged in collision with a British vessel in the Bay of Biscay, tonight were being brought to this port on the steamer Commandant Gamas of the Gironde Pilot Service. They were not expected to arrive until tomorrow morning.

The Ceylan, bound from Buenos Aires to Hamburg, was struck at 8:30 this morning about 80 miles off La Couvre Point by the small British steamer Clodoald. Few details of the collision were received here.

The Clodoald suffered little or no damage and stood by. The crew and passengers of the Ceylan took to their boats and went aboard the English craft.

Mr. Fix is a handy man to do the little odd jobs you've been putting off doing from day to day. You'll find his address and telephone number among today's advertisements in the "Personals" classification of The Post.

GAY COLORS NOTED IN FASHION PARADES

UNEVEN SKIRTS FEATURE

New York, March 31 (A.P.).—New Yorkers and their guests awoke to the surprise greeting of fair skies and sunshine today after yesterday's prediction of showers and snow, reshaped their scattered plans and went their separate ways in observance of Easter.

Church they attended enmasse, flocking to the services that ranged all the way from 7 o'clock at Washington Arch and Columbia University to the 4 o'clock pageant presented in St. Mark's in the Bouwerie.

At 11 o'clock the more famous cathedrals and churches, banked with lilies and lighted tapers and scented with incense, were thronged with the worshippers who were fortunate enough to posses the "tickets" that granted them admittance, while almost as many more were turned away from their doors. Even the smaller churches on the side streets were crowded during the services.

And then the throngs turned to the various fashion parades. Today those parades showed the effect of two things—the hand of time and the weather man's prophecy.

Many Fashion Parades.

Time was when New York had only one fashion parade, on Fifth avenue, and when the names of the paraders read like the list of the Social Register. But times have changed. Today upper Broadway, the Grand Concourse, Ocean avenue in Brooklyn, the Boardwalk on Coney Island were each the scene of a separate parade and the Social Registerites were not the dominant note of the picture.

The fashionables were to be found attired in knickers and sports sweaters on the golf links of Westchester County and Long Island, while it was the residents of Third and Eighth avenues, of Fordham and the Bronx that thronged the avenues to see—and be seen.

The effect of the weather man's prophecy of showers was noticeable. Many a woman chose her fur coat and her Easter wrap and contented herself with the display of a new chapeau and a bouquet of shoulder flowers as spring finery.

Even so, today's Fifth avenue parade was a crowded and colorful affair, marked with a number of gay hats and frocks, and scented with the perfume of Easter flowers. The warm weather and sunshine drew hundreds to view the spectacle, which despite counter attractions and the fear of showers, remained a spectacle.

Thousands moved up and down the avenue, laughing, chatting and looking, while sightseers loaded the buses in an effort to get a better view of the top-hatted, frock-coated, new-bonneted parade. Motion picture cameramen perched on the steps of buildings, newspaper photographers dashed up and down, and amateurs even moved into the streets with their cameras to snap the throng.

Milady's hemline was the most interesting item of her wardrobe. It showed a decided tendency to dip in uneven frills and side drapes beneath her coat, a style note that would have horrified the fashionables a year ago. Skirts in general were longer than last spring, many of them hanging 3 or 4 inches below the knee.

Footwear Matches Hats.

Hats were the most colorful note in the fashion display. They were fashioned of bright-hued felts and satins, decked with flowers, feathers and jeweled pins. There were snug bonnets that wrapped around bobbed heads and tied in a bow at the back, chapeaux with lace brims and long side points and hats with nose veils.

Footwear matched the headgear in color. Blue, green and orange-brown shoes were much in evidence, ornamented with polka dot designs, mosaic patterns and stripes of contrasting leather.

Black and dark-blue coats were the most popular wraps, while here and there a beige or gray ensemble was seen. Backs of wraps were more distinctive than their fronts, many of them being trimmed with large ribbon rosettes and silk bows that hung to the wearer's waist.

The frocks that showed beneath the wraps were fashioned of plaids and polka dots and prints, while chartreuse green, orange yellow and cobalt blue were the most popular shades.

John D. Gets Easter Eggs; Donates Dimes

Just as he left the little white church at which he attended services, the aged oil magnate was presented with a flower-entwined basket filled with gaily-colored eggs. The basket was presented by two young children, who were each given a shiny dime for their thoughtfulness. It was Mr. Rockefeller's last Sunday here this spring, and a large crowd gathered to bid him goodbye.

Letter 6 Years Late Received in Virginia

Waynesboro, Va., March 31.—Miss Estelle Menefee, daughter of Mrs. T. B. Menefee, of Waynesboro, has just received a letter mailed to her in Detroit six years ago. Since May 14, 1923, it had been awaiting collection in an abandoned box at the Elks Home, where it had been mailed by its writer.

According to the explanation sent with the delayed letter by the Detroit postal authorities, a "locked receptacle" had been used by officials of the home for their private correspondence for several years. Later it was abandoned, but never taken down. Recently a visitor who had dropped a letter into it learned of his mistake and asked the authorities to recover it for him. The box was broken open and more than 50 letters mailed over the years since the box's abandonment were found.

Funeral services will be held at the residence at 8:30 o'clock tomorrow, followed by mass at Holy Trinity Church, Georgetown, at 9:15 o'clock. Burial will be in Holy Rood Cemetery.

Mrs. McDonald is survived by one daughter, Mrs. Theresa O'Brien, of Washington.

Cardinal Lucidi Dies; Cuts Italians' Minority to 26

EVARISTE CARDINAL LUCIDI.

Rome, March 31 (N.Y.W.N.S.).—The death here today of Cardinal Evariste Lucidi, former auditor to the Pope, reduces the number of Italian cardinals in the Sacred College to 26, as compared with 33 foreign members. Cardinal Lucidi was 62. Death was due to bronchial pneumonia, which followed a heart attack and influenza.

Cardinal Lucidi received the red hat at a consistory in 1923 at which Cardinal Aurelio Galli, the distinguished Latinist, who died March 26, also was raised to the cardinalate.

At the time of Cardinal Galli's death five days ago the Holy See let it be known that the minority of Italian cardinals in the Sacred College gave rise to no anxiety lest the situation should lead to the election of a non-Italian Pope. It was pointed out at the time that several new cardinals are expected to be created at a consistory to be held some time in May and the likelihood is they will be Italians.

It was stressed at the Vatican today that, even should the Holy See become suddenly vacant, the cardinals residing at Rome, regardless of their nationality, would vote for an Italian Pope. The last non-Italian Pope was Adrian VII, born at Utrecht, Holland, who became Pontiff in 1522.

70,000 Expected to Inspect Capital Zoo Animals Today

The White House may be the home of the President of the United States and therefore the center from which all activities of the Government radiate, but this is one day when the White House is forced to share the Capital's spotlight with another national institution, the Zoological Park.

Easter Monday is the big day on the calendar at the Zoo. It is so big that special regulations are in order at the park to protect the thousands of Washington residents and their out-of-town guests who come to see the animals.

However, seeing the animals is not the main object of most of those who trek through the Connecticut avenue, Harvard street and Rock Creek Park entrances of the park. The real aim is to have a beautiful place in which to hold the first picnic of the summer season.

With favorable weather, the crowds at the Zoo will reach a total of 70,000, according to Dr. William M. Mann, director. So great has been the crush and jam in other years that recently Zoo officials have adopted the policy of closing the gates and doors to all the houses in the Zoo, leaving only the animals in the open air cages ready for inspection by the visitors.

This action was taken because at one time in one of the crowded houses at the Zoo some one shouted, starting a stampede which resulted in injuries to several persons.

Egg rolling will be on the program at the Zoo today, this activity rivaling similar sport on the lawn of the White House. To prevent possible accidents to children playing in the park during the day, the gates will be closed to all automobile traffic. Autos will be permitted to discharge passengers at entrances but no parking in the Zoo will be allowed.

A representative of Chatman, of London, England, will visit Dr. Mann at the Zoo today and there is a possibility that some new animals may shortly be added to the already magnificent array in the park. The Chatman firm of animal dealers is to England what the Hagenbecks are to Germany.

Yesterday the "biggest show in Washington" which is what Dr. Mann likes to hear the Zoo called, was doing a rushing business from early morning until closing time.

Lions roared for hundreds of children who never had been in the Zoo before. N'Gi, the tiny gorilla, performed all his favorite tricks before an admiring audience. He tossed his bright red ball about, shook a doll, swung on rings, clambered around the bars of his cage and at meal time ate with a splendid show of dignity.

Huge brown, black and white bears raised themselves on their hunches to munch forbidden peanuts which youngsters insisted on throwing to them, while down the road wolves howled and seals grunted. Monkeys climbed trees and chattered incessantly, tiny deer trotted up to fences to watch the crowds with wistful eyes and huge buffalo roamed their enclosure while little boys and girls stood in awe.

and other points which hold a center of interest for all Americans.

Automobiles from almost every State in the Union could be seen; buses hauled boys and girls from point to point as these students took advantage of a school holiday to get a history and civics lesson at first hand. Street cars carried others, while sidewalks were jammed with pedestrians strolling about to see what others saw and see what others wore.

Several hundred visitors in the city gathered at Friends Meeting House, Thirteenth and Irving streets northwest, near noon to see the President and Mrs. Hoover attend church services. In contrast to the splendor of the rituals at many of the religious edifices of the Capital, the services at the church where the Hoovers worshiped was simple indeed. Augustus Murray, of Palo Alto, President Hoover's California home, preached the sermon and a few hymns were sung, with only a piano as the accompaniment.

After the services the President and the First Lady went back to the White House. An automobile ride, a regular feature of the Sabbath, was taken in the afternoon, while Mr. Hoover rested last night. Members of the Cabinet followed almost the same procedure, with attendance at church in the morning and rest marking the remainder of the day.

The President's Easter was marred by news of the death of Ambassador Myron T. Herrick in Paris. Mr. Hoover immediately telegraphed to the ambassador's son in Cleveland, expressing the sympathy of Mrs. Hoover and himself.

Curtis at Easter Breakfast.

Easter flowers from many in official life of the Capital filled the White House, while the conservatories of the Executive Mansion furnished additional blossoms to decorate the home of the President.

The Franciscan Monastery, St. Patrick's Church, St. Matthew's Church and the Shrine of the Sacred Heart, of the Catholic churches, offered special masses at which thousands worshiped.

A united Easter service was held by the Salvation Army in the Georgetown branch, Jefferson near M street, at which Staff Capt. James Asher, in charge of the Army for the District of Columbia, presided.

One of the outstanding social events of the day was an Easter breakfast, attended by a number of prominent Washingtonians, including Vice President Curtis and his sister, Mrs. Edward H. Gann, and Secretary of the Navy and Mrs. Charles Francis Adams.

Sixteenth street and Connecticut avenue were the parade boulevards over which a bewildering display of what the well-dressed woman should wear was presented to an ever-eager public.

Easter parades are not what they used to be, what with automobiles and airplanes, but those who took the usual Easter Sunday stroll along these highways gave more than a glimpse of what is to be the style in spring wear.

It seems that color is demanded in the 1929 ensemble by those who set the mode. There have been no radical changes, but those made are definite and flattering. The harsh knee skirt, tight and skimpy, has gone. Nonsport dresses are one-piece. Plain black coats, which emphasized every fault of posture and figure, are out, too.

Simplicity has been substituted for plainness, but the new coats display little cuts and seamings that have a way of doing most flattering things to every woman.

Straw hats are all the rage. No outfit seemed complete without one whether it be ballybunty, bankok or baku. And the new style hats reveal the eyes of the wearer, whether or not that hat has a brim.

Hats and stockings, hats and sweaters, hats and gloves or gloves and stockings matched, this matching proposition apparently being one of the prime requisites of the spring outfit.

All this, of course, is a meager description of what the women wore. As for the men, they had the usual striped and plain suits of blue, grey, tan and brown with some of the latter running into a reddish tinge while considerable color has been added to the headgear of the ultra-stylish. Most of the citizenry, however, pressed last spring's suit, got a shoe shine and brushed off last winter's hat and fared out onto the highways and byways with a brave display of nonchalance.

TEACHERS VICTIMS OF DIVERSE RULES

SOME MUST SELL BOOKS

New York, March 31 (N.Y.W.N.S.).—The teacher who smokes cigarettes will not be granted a certificate in the State of Tennessee; the dancing schoolma'am will not be tolerated in some parts of Mississippi; while in other regions of the country the school board is the fashion dictator for its teachers and failure to read the Bible in school is a statutory cause for dismissal. Finally, if the distracted woman teacher marries, this is "an agreed ground for termination of the contract" in many States.

These are only a few of the restrictions on American schoolteachers revealed in a survey of teachers' contracts and State and local rules in approximately 500 school systems in 46 States. The survey issued today was made by Dr. Earl William Anderson, working under Dr. N. L. Engelhardt, professor of education at Teachers College, Columbus.

Dr. Anderson examined contracts signed by teachers and superintendents in more than 400 communities, regulations of boards of education rules of State educational agencies and laws by State legislatures. Conditions in cities of all sizes, beginning with a population of 2,500, and from all States except Nevada and Wyoming, are represented in the report.

Included in the findings are regulations which make the famous anti-evolution law seem tame. It is revealed that the restrictions on public school officials over the Nation are so many and so varied and detailed that it is practically impossible to define the exact status of a modern school teacher. In one community a teacher's restrictions may be very light, but on moving to another community this same teacher may be obliged to do everything from selling school texts to cooperate with every agency that conscientiously strives to better the community."

Advocates State Regulation.

To relieve the hodge-podge condition, Dr. Anderson advocates "State regulations of all situations which do not have distinct local significance." He commends New York State as far ahead in establishment of minimum professional standards and ethical requirements. New York, he adds, is one of the leaders in the State control movement which he reports is on the increase.

The local white light district is expressly warned against in the contract of the New Albany, Miss., schools, thus:

"No teacher will play society to the detriment of the school or indulge in any sort of socials excessively during school nights, the superintendent and school board to be the judges of these matters and to warn teachers."

At Columbus City, Nebr., elementary teachers agree "to pursue a course in the method of business until such time as a teacher's certificate in this method may be secured."

Various communities provide for the teachers' assistance in the sale of textbooks to pupils, while those in Beaumont, Tex., must agree to purchase and read at least one educational book during the year. In other communities the teacher is required to visit the home of every pupil at least once.

Marriage Ends Contract.

Contracts from eighteen States give marriage of women teachers as an agreed ground of termination of the contract, and of the cities under 20,000 one-fourth reported that a contract could be voided if a woman teacher marries during the year.

The Tennessee statute expressly says: "Under no circumstances shall certificates be granted to persons addicted to the use of intoxicants, opiates or cigarettes." Among the various causes listed for dismissal in different parts of the country are "treasonable or seditious acts or words, failure to teach effects of alcohol and narcotics, failure to attend teachers' institute, the wearing of religious garb while teaching."

Dr. Anderson reports that the status of the New York City teacher is well defined and carefully adjusted, making for consistent advancement yearly without the imposition of undue restrictions. He adds, however, that the status of the teacher in Chicago is at the other extreme.

The cause, he reveals, is that Illinois provides only a few minimum requirements and leaves such arbitrary matters as salary, marriage of women teachers and tenure to be adjusted by the local school board.

IN THE PLAY HOUSE

By JOHN J. DALY

Without benefit of a known producer, Patrick Kearney's dramatization of Theodore Dreiser's much talked of novel, "An American Tragedy," wandered about on the boards of the Belasco last night, and wandered, and wandered, and wandered, and wandered, whilst an audience and a few play reviewers wondered.

One exceedingly keen observer, an elderly and kindly disposed lady, opined that "this, evidentally, must be a New York cast," whereas the truth is "this was the original Baltimore cast," as the lady sitting beside me pointed out. She had heard the story of how this gallant band of troupers, called together for the occasion, had started "An American Tragedy" on its way in Baltimore, at the Auditorium Theater down on Howard street; how the gendarmes of the Monumental City had been invited by an irate citizen—spurred on by a press agent—to witness this damnable bit of dramaturgy and then throw the works into the hoosegow; how such sensational stuff had led into stampedes at the boxoffice and how, heaven only knows, "An American Tragedy" ran full six weeks in the Monumental City.

This was only recently, of course, and after the original New York cast had disbanded after a short run on Broadway. The play received serious reviews there, and deservedly so.

The literary world, by this time, is fully aware of the momentousness of Mr. Dreiser's novel. Made into a play it comes in episodic form, depicting the sad, sad story of a youth who loved not wisely nor even well. Nephew of a collar king the boy is befriended by his uncle and given a place in the factory to supervise a battallion of girls. Because the uncle's family gives their cousin the "Go-Go" sign, as the saying has it, he falls for one of the lower classes—and then, after doing the girl dirt, also as the saying has it, finds a real society catch in his net. Obviously, the boy has to get rid of the factory girl—and the easiest way he finds in a row boat and a lake.

There is a note on the program which reads: "A great moral lesson is taught in this play, and though some of the language used may seem rather broad to you the story was written from actual scenes in life. Kindly view it accordingly." Naturally having read that the sportive attendant at the Washington premiere looked for the great moral lesson—and it was found in this wise: In the earlier scenes of the play, one of the boy's fellow workers at the factory offered to produce two young ladies of somewhat shady reputations; good sports, withal, who wanted nothing more nor less than a good time. The searcher after truth and the moral, at last night's performance, saith: "The moral is, the boy should have taken the first offer."

Certainly he would have been saved a lot of trouble, a trial for murder, a verdict of guilty, and a lonely march to the electric chair.

Granted that such a sordid story as this has any place on the boards, it deserves at least better treatment. As presented here, "An American Tragedy" is a theatrical one as well—and the least said about it the better.

POLI'S

"Good News," that sprightly musical comedy which opened at Poli's last night, is a play based on college life so nothing need be said about the plot. Some day a daring iconoclast will write a college play which is not based upon the struggles of the hero to win the big game of the season "for good old (Yale, Harvard, Princeton, Siwash, St. Elizabeths—take your choice)". But, if such a piece were written it would be necessary to find a producer who had been to college, so probably it will never be staged.

However, as hinted heretofore, "Good News" is a musical comedy, so the plot is unimportant, and, perhaps for that reason, it is a very good musical comedy. The large house which graced Poli's last night, celebrating the end of the Lenten season, greeted the piece enthusiastically and when a musical comedy has pleased an audience it is a good musical comedy and has fulfilled all of the aims of its high destiny.

Tuneful music, clever lines, sprightly dances, liberally garnished with equal parts of shapely right and left legs (f.) are the ingredients from which successful musical comedies are concocted. "Good News" has all of these and they are skillfully put together.

First honors should, by all odds, be awarded to Dorothy Daw, a Washington girl, and William Sully. The former is cast in the role of the college flapper about whom the elder generation are expending such large quantities of needless worry, since she is far better equipped to take care of herself than are the oldsters. The part fits Miss Daw to perfection. Sully is the traditional substitute who gets an unexpected chance to play in the "big game" and, of course, wins it. Be it said for the authors, however, that they have had the daring to portray this character in a comedy role instead of the hitherto inevitable serious young man trying to get ahead. Miss Daw and Mr. Sully collaborate in some of the cleverest bits of eccentric dancing exhibited hereabouts in several silver moons.

Don Lanning, in the part of the captain of the football team; Evelyn Kindler, as the college belle, who, of course, is engaged to the captain, but doesn't marry him, and Dorothy Fitz-Gibbon, as the belle's poor-relation cousin, who eventually wins the captain, handled their opportunities to the queen's—and the audiences'—taste. The Fitz-Gibbon young lady, incidentally, has a charm coupled with beauty and grace which should carry her far in the direction of white lights in the major theatrical constellations.

John Philbrick, as "Pooch" Kearney, the trainer, turned in a capable bit of character acting, as did Maurice Darcy, the professor, who refused to flunk the football captain on the eve of the big game; Anthony Hughes, as the coach; Edwin Michaels, as the inevitable freshman, and John Grant as "Beef" Saunders, a football player of the preforward pass type.

Moreover the coeds were pretty and even some of the chorus men looked as though they had been in college, or at least, could get in. Needless to say the last-named feature is heretical, but it didn't hurt the play.

THE STRAND

With Art Mayer the featured comedian, "The Bohemians" are holding forth at the Strand this week, and doing a mighty fine job of it, too, should any one be concerned.

Frankie ("Red") Moore is there with bells on, leading the feminine contingent, and the show goes along at a merry pace, fast enough to please all lovers of burlesque.

Other members in the cast worthy of mention are Dolly Lewis, dancing soubrette; Emelie Billings, a blues singer, and Johnny Gilmore, the rubber-faced comedian, who is well known in this port.

There are some clever burlesque scenes, one of the outstanding ones being the well-known parody on Service's poem, "The Shooting of Dan McGrew," a classic on anybody's stage.

A STORM FROM THE WEST.

The Governors of Colorado, Wyoming and Utah are to enter a vigorous protest against President Hoover's order putting an end to oil exploration on the public domain. The Governors of Montana and Idaho are expected to join in the protest. At a hearing in Denver, at which two of the governors presided, witnesses described Mr. Hoover's decree as "the act of a Mussolini, who, finding himself not in harmony with the legislative branch of the Government, can, with the stroke of a pen, eliminate legislation which may appear to him to be objectionable." Others asserted that his order was a "bold and arbitrary usurpation of the powers of the legislative arm of the Government." Gov. Dern of Utah stated that more than $5,000,000 expended in oil exploration work in his State has been wiped out by the Hoover order. It was the opinion of these Western critics that Mr. Hoover had acted in ignorance of the real needs and the real situation in the West, and Gov. Emmerson of Wyoming made sarcastic comment upon the fact that he had campaigned for Mr. Hoover on the ground that he belonged to the West and knew the West, only to find that "almost his first official act is a direct slap at the West and one of its basic industries."

The "basic industry" referred to is evidently the exploitation of the Government's oil supply for the profit of certain States. Mr. Hoover is determined to put a stop to this exploitation. His order is held by the Western exploiters to be a nullification of the leasing law, but they will have great difficulty in proving this assertion. The leasing law authorizes the issuance of permits and leases, but it does not direct the Secretary of the Interior to make them. Senator Walsh, of Montana, has suggested that when a law provides that a department head "may" do a certain thing it should be construed to mean that he "shall" do it.

These Western politicians are bent upon forcing the United States to drain its oil from the public lands, for the sake of diverting revenue to certain States, regardless of the danger of overproduction of oil, and regardless of the need of conserving oil for the national defense. They seem to think they have found an issue that will appeal to popular sentiment in their States and thus give them political advantages at Mr. Hoover's expense.

The country will watch the development of this fight with the keenest interest. When the time comes for these politicians and their allies in Congress to demand an amendment of the law which would compel the President to squander the Nation's oil reserves it will be found that Mr. Hoover is not alone, but on the contrary is backed by the entire country. Even in the States which are said to be violently opposed to his order there is a strong element that refuses to be deceived by the politicians in temporary control of the political machines of those States. These politicians are going up against a losing fight when they attack the head of the Government because he is conserving the Government's property. They will not only lose their fight, but they will lose their jobs if they persist, for nothing is more certain than the prompt appearance of strong rivals who will line themselves with President Hoover and the prevailing sentiment of the country. Every governor who tries to take an unfair advantage of the Nation makes himself a target for rivals who can destroy him on such an issue.

YOUR TURN, WALL STREET.

Senators King and Brookhart, in emulation of Senator Glass, threaten to force a senatorial investigation of Wall street, the credit situation, and the Federal Reserve Board's attempt to force a curtailment of brokers' loans. The Reserve Board campaign and the crash in Wall street presented a rare opportunity for investigation, and the boys are hopping to it. There is no way of telling how many other senators harbor hopes of sponsoring an investigation, but no doubt there are several. The tariff and farm relief may be the main courses in the forthcoming extra session, but there will be tempting entrees and desserts in the way of investigations.

Money, banking and credit are subjects for expert attention. Each is subject to economic law, and legislative action that does not coincide with economic law is dangerous. The senators competent to frame useful money, banking and credit legislation may be counted on the fingers of one hand.

If the power of the Federal Reserve Board should be increased, or if some other legislative curb should be applied to the activities of so-called market speculators, it becomes a problem for experts to deal with. A general investigating committee, enamored of the pet panaceas of theorists to whom Wall street is a fearful monster preying and fattening on the agricultural dollar, can give trouble aplenty.

AMBASSADOR HERRICK.

The death of Myron T. Herrick, American Ambassador to France, will be deplored on both sides of the Atlantic. He had not been in good health for several years, but in spite of bodily weakness he pursued an active life, well knowing that he was overtaxing his strength in the good cause of better international relations.

Mr. Herrick was not merely an admirer of France and the French people—he loved them. In the time of greatest stress he proved his devotion to them, not ostentatiously or with diplomatic purpose, but with personal and wholehearted zeal. Long ago the French government found in him a trusted adviser and friend, who interpreted to it the genuine sentiments of the American people. His knowledge of French opinion was, of course, of the utmost value to the United States. Under Presidents Taft, Wilson, Harding, Coolidge and Hoover he faithfully served his country, his first term as ambassador running from 1912 and his second from 1921 until his death. He had had long political experience before entering the Diplomatic Corps, having attended many national conventions and served as Governor of Ohio from 1903 to 1906.

The post of American envoy to France has been filled by a long line of illustrious citizens. Gov. Herrick maintained the best traditions of the place which was created by Benjamin Franklin. Both France and the United States owe him a debt of gratitude, which will be paid by the highest funeral honors and by cherishing his memory.

INDUSTRIAL AMERICA.

The biennial census of manufactures, which has just been made public by the Department of Commerce, shows that products of American factories during 1927 reached the tremendous value of $62,721,375,881. This wealth was created in 191,866 factories which employed an average of 8,353,325 workers during the year and paid them a total of nearly $11,000,000,000. Power, fuel, factory supplies and materials cost over $35,000,000,000.

The figures represent the extent to which the United States has become industrialized. The greater part of the national wealth is now produced in the densely populated manufacturing States. The Department of Commerce found that seven States, which form an irregular strip bordering on the Great Lakes from Illinois to the Atlantic, contributed 60.1 per cent of the total output. In the relative order of their production these States are New York, Pennsylvania, Illinois, Ohio, Michigan, New Jersey and Massachusetts. New York's products were valued at $9,406,751,185, or 15 per cent of the total for the United States. Outside of this group of seven, no other State reported manufacturing industries turning out more than $3,000,000,000 worth of goods.

When the combined value of manufactured products is compared with the agricultural harvest for the same year—estimated by the Department of Agriculture to amount to $8,522,563,000—the extent to which the country is becoming industrialized is apparent. Several of the seven States which produce 60 per cent of the industrial wealth also have agricultural crops of considerable value, yet they have only 40 per cent of the population. If we allot the total agricultural output to the remaining 41 States, plus the 40 per cent of the industrial production to which they are entitled, this vast area still produces less in agricultural and manufactured products than the seven leading States.

Of course this can not be taken as an indication of the wealth producing powers of the nonmanufacturing States, because it does not take into consideration their mineral production and miscellaneous industries. But it does indicate the vast change that is coming over the country and the extent to which the people are flocking to industrial centers.

UNIVERSAL GAS TAX.

The gasoline tax is now a generally accepted method of raising revenue in every State and the District of Columbia. Most of the States have had gasoline taxes in effect for several years. A few days ago an act of the Illinois Legislature levying a 3-cent gasoline tax became effective, and the New York Legislature passed a 2-cent gasoline tax before adjourning Thursday night. It is singular that the State which has the greatest number of automobiles should be the last to enact such a law.

Statistics issued recently by the Vermont Chamber of Commerce show the amount of the tax levied against motorists in each State. Seven States, all of them in the South, collect 5 cents per gallon. Twelve States are now operating under a 4-cent levy, and thirteen other States will change their levy to 4 cents as a result of legislation passed this year. Utah is the only State collecting 3½ cents. Thirteen States collect 3 cents per gallon, and fourteen others will be added to this list during the summer. The District of Columbia and the twelve remaining States collect 2 cents.

The tax is easily collected, and it places the burden for construction and maintenance of highways on the people who use them. Only through use of the gasoline tax have many States been able to carry out their extensive road improvement programs. The relation between gas tax levies and good highways is easily apparent. The proportion of highway funds furnished by this tax varies from State to State. In the District more than half of the $2,940,600 spent on streets and roads in 1928 came from the 2-cent levy against motorists.

It is significant that not one State having passed a gasoline tax has repealed it. Illinois' first gas-tax statute was found to be unconstitutional, but another one was soon passed. A large majority of the States have increased their levies as motorists become more reconciled to the tax. It is safe to say that untaxed gasoline is now a thing of the past, and that in the future the States will make still greater use of this method of financing their highway construction programs.

WHY THE SOUTH TURNED

By ROBERT W. WINSTON.
In the Review of Reviews.

In the last six years the sixteen Southern States have issued more than two and a quarter billions in bonds. The interest on this large sum at 4 per cent is ninety odd million dollars. A people involved in a debt of billions can not afford to waste time on sentimentality or hate. If they do, the sheriff will surely get them. To succeed now the South must be up and doing, employing every human agency and all fair methods to this end. If the South does not go forward she must go backward. Politics is not morals, politics is business, and Hancock was everlastingly right: the tariff is a local issue, the tariff is meat and bread, and those failing to understand this surely need a guardian.

These principles or policies the Southern people are now beginning to understand. Peanut growers now see that they can not compete with the pauper labor of China and Japan, where peanuts are grown at a cent and a half a pound. It is also seen that mica mines cannot compete with foreign mica, and that the same holds for the common brick industry. Each of these industries, together with tobacco, tomatoes and numberless others, are now beseeching Congress for protection. The South has at last discovered that her job is manufacturing; that while she cannot compete with the wheat and corn fields of the West, she can compete with the best in factories.

Climate and labor make this possible, as the following contrasts between North Carolina and certain other States show: Savings that North Carolina offers over the Pennsylvania, New York, Massachusetts sector are half in fuel costs; half in clothing costs; half in vegetable costs; half in labor costs; about half in general costs; half in vacation costs; and there is more comfort in North Carolina's predominant small city population.

Gains that North Carolina offers over the Pennsylvania, New York, Massachusetts sector are one-fourth more sunshine hours a year; one-fourth more rainfall inches a year; half more days in the planting season; 100 per cent of the year in which one may walk or motor in comfort; almost as much when one may sit out-of-doors; and almost as much of the year when one may push building operations.

These figures imply that in a few years certain Northern States will have no great need for a tariff, or for the Republican party, while the South will be wedded to both protection and Republicanism. In the last election, Massachusetts and Rhode Island went Democratic, and Virginia and North Carolina went over to the Republican column.

In the last six years Southern bond issues, by States alone, aggregated a billion dollars for roads, and three hundred millions for schools. This does not include county and city issues, which would largely swell the amount. A public debt may be a public blessing; certainly it may prove so to the South. By means of bond issues the South is raising vast sums of money, shaking off senility, educating her children, pulling herself out of the mud. Last year she expended on roads and bridges four hundred millions of dollars, and purchased nearly half a million automobiles.

The population of the sixteen Southern States is more than forty millions; the gross value of their products is more than eighteen billions; they own seven million autos, and have invested fifty millions in rayon plants. Of rayon production experts declare that one hundred million pounds were produced last year, and that the rayon production of the United States is definitely centered in the Southern States. In one year the mineral output of the South is more than a billion dollars; her cotton manufacturing more than one billion, her coal production two hundred and seventy-four million tons; she annually exports a hundred and ninety-four million tons; her bank resources are ten billions; she expends in public schools each year four hundred and twenty-six millions; her revenue taxes run up to six hundred and thirty-eight millions—North Carolina leading all States except New York and Illinois—and paying taxes amounting to $205,650,000. Southern construction contracts are annually about one billion dollars. The South produces 58 per cent of the world's cotton, and has five times as large a coal area as all Europe combined, excluding Russia.

These vast industries are largely dependent on the Government for protection and support—business and governmental protection going hand in hand. The State that snuggles closest to the national Government is usually a wise and highly favored State.

Shall a people favored as are the Southern people fail to realize these significant facts? In the past they have missed golden opportunities, despising or neglecting their Government, and going without governmental assistance. Shall they continue to vote one way and pray another; shall they theorize and starve, or be practical and wax fat?

The best answer to these questions is the break-up of the solid South in the last election. In Dixie, 1929 came in with a bang, the industrial interests alert and confident.

WHITE SUPREMACY.

By PAUL R. HICHBORN.

Once General Miles, of frontier fame,
Upon a raid was bent,
For certain red men, Sioux by name,
Had shown a fierce intent.

His troopers faced an arduous task,
Of riding day and night,
And wisdom urged that they should mask
Their strength by traveling light.

So all equipment they could spare,
And safely do without,
They stripped forthwith, from horse and man,
And stacked it round about.

The General called a friendly chief,
And said: "If in your hands
These stores I leave, will they be safe
From knaves and thieving bands?"

The Chief replied: "I'll trust our kin,
And you need have no fear,
For not a white man is within
One hundred miles of here."

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR.

North Pole Submarines.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Capt. Sir George Hubert Wilkins, Arctic explorer, plans to explore the sea beneath and surrounding the North Pole in a submarine. The craft is being prepared now in a Connecticut shipyard, and the venture will be got under way this summer or next. New types of equipment, many of them untried, will be carried to make possible emergence of the submarine from beneath ice floes and to guard against accidents. Capt. Wilkins thinks the venture will be safer than an airplane flight across the pole.

Those who are content to let others do their adventuring will see no excuse for such a trip. Capt. Wilkins says that it is necessary in the interest of the advancement of science—that there is need of a more comprehensive study of ocean depths above the Arctic Circle, an investigation of ocean currents, their direction, force and temperature, a study of conditions and drift of the ice and of the contour of the ocean bed. The question may properly be asked as to how a scientist imprisoned in a steel vessel submerged beneath the surface of the sea can hope to study currents, contour or ice drift? Will he be able to make better or more extensive surveys from the interior of a submarine than he could make from camps established on the ice?

A voyage to and across the North Pole in a submarine is in the nature of a stunt. It can no more be justified than the several transatlantic flight ventures, in obviously inadequate machines, each of which ended in tragic failure. If Capt. Wilkins is a scientist rather than an adventurer he will not embark on such a foolhardy trip.

W. A. DONALDSON.

Says Prohibition Stops Wars.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Your correspondent, under nom de plume of Henda Burke, heaps sarcasm and levity upon prohibition. That is the way of wringing wets. Sooner or later they come to realize that there are no valid arguments against prohibition and they take recourse in sarcasm and levity. When they reach that stage they indirectly admit that their cause is lost.

These people make the charge that by depriving diplomats of liquor the Government would precipitate war. Tommyrot! Every nation that participated in the last war was a drinking nation. Of them all, the United States alone espoused the cause of prohibition, and look at its position today in comparison with that of the others. It is generally the sot who seeks a fight. It is the drinking nation that can not keep peace. The United States, because its people have adopted the blessing of total abstinence, will never have another war, and by forcing prohibition on other nations it will speed the attainment of world peace.

Incidentally, what a lot of pother the newspapers are making over the case of several congressmen who, it is alleged, imported or attempted to import liquors. These congressmen are all drys; they have proved that they are friends of prohibition by their votes upon the many liquor control measures that have been in Congress. Is it reasonable to suppose that they would break the laws for which they voted? If they did bring in, or try to bring in, rum, it could only have been to test the efficiency with which customs agents are enforcing the prohibition laws.

E PLURIBUS UNUM.

Timing of Signal Lights.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: District traffic officials are studying a plan to affix beneath each traffic signal a sign specifying the speed that an automobile must travel to avoid stopping at the next signal light. The plan is designed to bring about a more even flow of traffic, and appears to be full of possibilities. It has already been found a success in Detroit.

One of the foremost problems traffic officials in Washington have to face is that of congestion when thousands of Government clerks and business men are driving to the business district just before 9 a. m. and again in the afternoon when Government workers are released for the day. If a steady flow of traffic could be secured during these periods, the possibility of accident and the waste of time caused by delays should be greatly diminished. Any plan which has the possibility of relieving this situation is worthy of careful consideration by the traffic director.

Under present conditions there is no way of knowing how long before the light one is approaching will change, and the condition is aggravated by the long and short blocks in many parts of the city. A driver naturally wishes to avoid stopping if he can and therefore speeds to get across the intersection before the signals change. This situation tends to make traffic move in spurts and sudden stops, which is dangerous and costly in wear and tear on streets and vehicles.

District officials have indicated that before they decide to try the plan here a new study of the timing of lights will be made to more accurately meet the needs of traffic in the controlled districts. The success of the light signal system depends largely upon the skill with which the signals are timed. If too slow, traffic will be sluggish and congested. If the changes are made too rapidly, motorists are tempted to violate the speed laws and the traffic moves in jerks. The ideal is to keep traffic moving at the maximum speed which can be safely traveled in each district, with as few stops as possible. If the lights were timed so that they would allow motorists to proceed at a reasonable pace with little or no interruption, and drivers were informed as to what speed they must maintain to avoid the next red light, much might be accomplished.

Love for a Dollar Makes the Dollar Your Only Friend.

By ROBERT QUILLEN

"WHEN the wolf comes in at the door," said the ancients, "love goes out the window"—which isn't true at all, unless the love is nothing more than a fondness for soft living.

But it is true that love ends when two people desire the same dollar.

The greatest enemy of love is the love of money. Men of large spirit may be friends although competitors in business, but only the rarest of men can do business with one another and remain friends or develop friendship.

You hear a man boast that his customers are his friends, and you hear others say that a business built on friendship has the best of foundations; but these are thinking of good will—not of true friendship.

True friendship—which many people never know because they have no capacity for it—is an abiding love, and love is the spirit of unselfishness.

The getting of money is a business selfish in origin, in purpose and in practice.

To say that friendship and money-getting can exist together is to say that unselfishness and selfishness can exist together.

The desire and mission and joy of friendship is to serve—to give.

The two can not be reconciled.

Friends who would keep one another should avoid money dealings as they would a plague.

When a friend driven by desperation goes to another to borrow money, he may repay it and preserve the friendship entire; but if he does not repay it, the other says to his soul: "He capitalized our friendship. He sacrificed my respect to get a little money. How little he valued our friendship if he could sell it for a sum so small."

And even if the money is repaid, the one who lends feels that friendship has been soiled by serving as collateral for a loan; and, what is worse, can not again feel secure in friendship because of his lively dread of future borrowings.

To borrow from a friend is to place friendship in pawn.

And to do business with a friend, so that the profit hoped for must be obtained at the friend's expense, is to sacrifice love on the altar of greed.

Those who love—whether man and man or man and wife or brother and sister—must avoid the least competition for money if they would keep love alive.

WOMEN TO RULE?

Disquieting news for men is coming out of Chicago, that source of so much that is disturbing and exciting in the modern American scene, observes the Richmond Times-Dispatch. Not content with its bumper crop of unterrified gangsters who so frequently enliven the mid-Western metropolis with pitched battles in the streets, the Windy City has now produced a statistician who has figured out that by the year 2035, just a little more than 100 years from now, all the wealth of the country will be in feminine hands.

This, certainly, is not a "consummation devoutly to be wished," not, at least by that part of the population which is convinced that "a woman is only a woman, but a good cigar is a smoke." It conjures up unpleasant pictures from the deep and buried past, visions of that ancient time when women were the tribal lords and men more or less necessary evils, useful as consorts and for certain types of house work but nothing much more.

There is no getting round the fact that in our civilization, such as it is, the person who holds the purse-strings is boss, and whether they know it or not women in the United States are rapidly acquiring control of the coin of the realm. They control 41 per cent of it now, according to a survey made by Chicago investment bankers, and are gaining a larger and larger share annually.

Once they have got the upper hand financially there will be no limit to their activity. Born imperialists, they will rule the roost with a vengeance, in a manner compared to which the iron rule of the czars will appear as gentle as the cooing of a dove. They will vote their kind into the legislatures and into the governors' chairs, into Congress and the Presidency. They will make the laws, upset customs and disrupt things generally, even putting an end to the quaint masculine pastime of dropping ashes all over the floor.

When that time comes, if we are still here we shall quietly be shoved off to some peaceful South Sea isle, take our ease in the shade of cooling palm trees and, dropping all the ashes we please, dream of happier days.

St. Louis Post-Dispatch: The way the country is going it will not be long until any girl can hope to be President.

New Wavelengths Needed.

Arkansas Gazette: Now that both short hair and long hair are popular, milady would welcome an authoritative reallocation of wavelengths.

Jealous Florida.

New York World: California wants Congress to cut the income tax, and it would be just like Florida to petition Congress to increase the rate.

Too Bad.

Pineville Sun: The writer of the song, "I Faw Down Go Boom," has just been run over by an automobile. It is feared that his injuries are not serious.

The Mighty Pen.

Richmond Register: A man forged his way from the Leavenworth prison, which may be taken to indicate that the pen is mightier than the saw.

A Difficulty.

Detroit News: There is no representative of the South in Mr. Hoover's Cabinet. This is apt to make it rather awkward in case of having to tell a dialect story.

Their Only Chance.

Cincinnati Inquirer: Democrats annually show great spirit in celebrating Jackson Day, but then after all that's about the only visible drain on their celebrating spirit.

He Said "Civilized."

Louisville Courier-Journal: President Portes Gil promises a "civilized" election in Mexico this year. It may be hoped he will not fashion it after the aldermanic contest in civilized Chicago.

There Are No Words.

New Orleans Times-Picayune: "Oklahoma's Governor Impeached for Incompetence." But what should be said about the competence of the voters who elect the kind of governors that their Legislatures have to impeach?

Unfair Competition.

Houston Post-Dispatch: Every alien found guilty of breaking the prohibition laws should be deported. It is hard enough for native sons to make an honest living without all this foreign competition.

Something to Worry Over.

Ohio State Journal: We'll bet one thing that gives Mr. Hoover an occasional moment of depression is what he knows about some of the people who are pledging their loyal aid in making his administration an unqualified success.

Moved.

Richmond Times-Dispatch: Mark Twain said that the reports of his death were greatly exaggerated. That applies also to the rumored demise of the White House spokesman. He has turned up in Northampton, Mass., speaking for Calvin Coolidge.

Anyway.

Rochester Democrat and Chronicle: Says Ernesto Nelson, Argentina's commissioner of education: "In the United States you make culture the servant of the individual; in Argentina we make the individual the servant of culture." Well, anyway our wage scale is higher.

Hand of Providence.

Milwaukee Journal: Now it is said to be a historical fact that Chicago originally was intended to be in Wisconsin. But a land clerk at Washington—may he rest in peace—made a mistake and drew a line which avoided this. Today Chicago is in Illinois by reason of that carelessness, and we can not help feeling that the hand of Providence guided the quill of that sleepy or muddle headed clerk.

THE ONCE OVER

By H. I. PHILLIPS

CRIME IN A BIG CITY.

("George McManus, held under a murder indictment in the Arnold Rothstein case, was cheered as he was given his liberty. 'Thank you,' he said, doffing his gray hat and smiling. He then stepped into a closed car and was whisked away under an escort of motorcycle police."—News item in New York papers.)

"Don't take it to heart so," said the Tombs Warden as he patted a sobbing District Attorney on the back.

"I can't help it," said the District Attroney in a choked voice. "He'll be awfully hard to replace."

"I know," said the Warden. "He had been here a long time and we had become quite used to him."

"But why should it be McManus the judge let go demanded the District Attorney, drying an eye. "There were so many others he might have taken away from me instead."

"It's hard to understand," admitted the Warden.

"He was one of the best suspects we ever had," sobbed the District Attorney.

"Certainly the best within my experience," agreed the Warden. "I seen a lot of suspects but McManus had no equal."

"Most suspects are suspected only by a few, but we all suspected McManus," went on the District Attorney. "Even the police suspected him * * * and you know how they dislike to suspect anybody."

"Why, even Grover Whalen suspected him a little, although it is hard to get Grover to suspect anybody except in a traffic violation. That's where we made our big mistake in McManus's case; we should have had him indicted for walking across Broadway against a red light."

"What was he charged with anyway?" asked the District Attorney. "Trying to bribe Borough President Harvey, wasn't he?"

"No," corrected the Warden. "That was two other fellows. McManus was charged with killing Rothstein."

"Who?"

"Rothstein."

"What Rothstein was that?"

"I think his first name was Gus. He was poisoned in a taxicab, or something like that, by some woman. I forgot her name."

"Nan Patterson?" asked the District Attorney.

"That's the one."

"I remember now," said the District Attorney. "It was ever so long ago."

Here both broke down and cried softly, as they looked at the empty cell vacated by Mr. McManus.

"Well, we'll have to get used to it," sighed the District Attorney. "Listen, did they treat him right when they released him? Did he get a good send-off?"

"Oh, yes, yes indeed. Motorcycle escort, cheering crowds and everything. I don't know when a suspect in a murder case has been treated better."

"Was there a reception on the steps of City Hall?"

"No, I don't think so."

"No band?"

"Not that I heard of."

"No scroll or keys to the City?"

"Nope."

THOSE WOMEN SPECULATORS.

Mazie: Oh, look! It says in the paper that money dropped from 20 to 15.

Gladys: Oh, aren't you glad you didn't have any?

WHO CAN TELL?

"Spring is here. Some young gentlemen will begin at once on plans for spending a vacation with pleasure. Others will plan to work harder and get ahead more rapidly, in spite of warm weather.

"Which of the two groups will enjoy real leisure a few years hence?"—Mr. Arthur Brisbane in "Today."

U. S. FOREIGN TRADE IS $8,000,000,000

Two-Fifths of Exports Now Carried by American Ships, Board Says.

EXPANSION IS ANALYZED

The water-borne foreign commerce of the United States during the fiscal year which ended June 30, last, aggregated nearly 100,000,000 long tons valued at approximately $8,000,000,000

This vast volume of American foreign trade was carried by 5,100 ships flying the flags of 28 countries and having an aggregate tonnage of 23,000,000 gross tons.

American ships carried slightly more than 39 per cent of the total volume, while vessels of foreign registry carried 61 per cent.

"As a result of the establishment of American shipping services in world trade routes which did not exist prior to the World War," says the Shipping Board in announcing the figures, "the carriage of American foreign trade in American ships has increased to more than one-third of the total carried, based on value. This shows a substantial increase over the prewar period, 1910-14, when American ships carried less than 9 per cent. The increase in carriage is significant, due to the fact that the United States has been handicapped by lack of modern tonnage.

"The record discloses that the principal maritime nations during the past seven years have built 1,600 ocean-going vessels of 10,000,000 gross tons, of which the United States is credited with less than 2½ per cent, or 39 in number, and about 3½ per cent in tonnage, or 380,000 tons.

"It is also illuminating that there has been a marked increase in American foreign trade in the trade areas where American shipping services have been inaugurated. For instance, prior to 1914 in the trade with South America five American-flag vessels of 23,000 gross tons participated, whereas today there are 90 vessels of 550,000 gross tons. In the trade with Asia, one American-flag line operated from Pacific Coast ports to the Far East. Today there are 140 vessels of 1,000,000 gross tons."

Cumberland River Flood Is Checked

Channel "Hump" Is Gone as the Stream Stops Spreading.

The "hump" visible in the channel as long as the river was rising, vanished during the night and the stream stopped spreading. If fair weather continues, it will remain stationary for about 48 hours and then start receding, according to the weather bureau.

It will take the river several days to get back into its banks. It has reached 10 and 12 blocks away to inundate business houses and homes.

Only the roofs of large warehouses and factories near the banks were visible today. Residents of southeast Nashville took their Easter outings in boats. About 600 families were being cared for in temporary quarters.

Union City, N. J., March 31 (N.Y.W. N.S.).—A modern liquor manufacturing plant, valued at $100,000, was seized and dismantled by Federal agents from the Newark prohibition administrator's office here yesterday. Two men were arrested and two stills, capable of producing 4,000 gallons of liquor, were destroyed.

Although the plant was said to be guarded by bootleggers, posted at corners adjoining the building, the two agents managed to get in and make the arrests. The prisoners, giving their names as Harry Brown, of Hoboken, and Samuel Ponzoo, of Union City, will be arraigned tomorrow.

Rothstein Will Hearing Is Set for This Morning

New York, March 31.—The hearing of the contest over the will of Arnold Rothstein, murdered gambler, which has been postponed six times, has been set definitely for 10:30 a. m. tomorrow before Surrogate O'Brien. State Senator Thomas I. Sheridan, counsel for Assemblyman Maurice A. Cantor, William Wellman and Samuel Brown, executors appointed under the will, said yesterday Cantor is ready and anxious to go to trial.

Surrogate O'Brien has issued notice to counsel that any further requests for adjournment must be accompanied by an affidavit setting forth specific legal reasons for the adjournment.

Frances Smith Funeral Plans Wait on Family

Springfield, Mass., March 31 (U.P.).—Definite funeral plans for Frances St. John Smith, the Smith College student who disappeared a year ago and whose body was found near here last week, are held in abeyance pending arrival of her family. It was considered likely the funeral would be at South Amherst.

Miss Smith disappeared while a student at Smith College and a Nation-wide search was made for her. Last week workmen found a body, badly decomposed, in the Connecticut River, and it later was identified, through teeth fillings and bridges, as that of the missing student.

MICHAELSON READY FOR BOND, IS REPORT

Michaelson, unless he is in hiding in Jacksonville, is speeding southward on a train which will reach here tonight.

Comment on the case was withheld.

"This thing involves big people. We might lose our jobs if we talked too much," said Prohibition Officer Ray, working out of the office of W. T. Day, with headquarters in Jacksonville, when asked why he wouldn't reveal all the details of the capture of Michaelson's trunks.

Ray's work made the case against Michaelson complete. It was he who traced the owner of the trunks after they had been found in Jacksonville's terminal, one of them dripping liquor.

"The district attorney's office is keeping mum," he added, "and we can't say anything."

All questions regarding the indictment and the subsequent delay in arresting Michaelson have been referred to the United States district attorney's office by the prohibition forces.

CHAPTER II.

Alice Visits the Circus.

In the second chapter Alice visits the circus and pretends to meet with an accident, thus gaining access to the living quarters of the fakirs. During the night she overhears a conversation convincing her that she is on the trail of the kidnapers.

ALICE cudgeled her brains for a better scheme to get in with the circus people. Her plan was to hire a horse, go riding and fall from the saddle just as she was passing the circus tent.

Arriving at Rixley, Alice walked out to the circus ground where she found the perfromance in full swing. She went in and sat down. She was wearing a large brooch of Japanese topaz, which are the nearest things to diamonds in the world. She felt that it might help her to command attention

A female bareback rider performing in the ring was down on the program as "Mlle. Louise." "Dick Rashleigh" was the next on the bill and he was followed by a clown, "Senor Gosso."

Alice went outside. As she walked around toward the back of the tent her foot slipped and down she went into a dirty pool. Instantly she decided to take advantage of her unpleasant situation. She gave a piercing scream. The doorkeeper hurried to her side. "What's happened? Are you hurt?" he cried. "Why don't you get up"

"Oh! oh! oh!" groaned Alice, writhing and twisting on the ground. "Don't touch me! I'm injured internally. I can explain to a woman, but not to a man."

The doorkeeper took the hint and hurried into the tent. In a moment he returned with a husky young fellow.

Alice lay perfectly still—in her very best faint. Between them the two men carried her into the tent.

"Why doesn't Miss Spencer come?" cried the younger man, impatiently. "She'll be dead, perhaps, if something hain't done."

A woman about 30, with hard, coarse features came bustling in. She was Mlle. Louise of the ring.

"Gee! look at her diamonds!" cried the doorkeeper. "I don't know about leaving you with all dat here alone, Miss Lou."

"What's the matter with you? Do you take me for as big a thief as you?" snapped the woman. "Her diamonds are safe with me."

"I'll bet they'll be safe wit' you, once yer get yer hands on them!" laughed the doorkeeper.

"Will you two get out? If you don't leave me the poor thing is liable to die."

They went off then and Alice was left to the tender care of Miss Spencer, who saw to it that Alice was put to bed on a cot in her own canvas room.

"You ought to have a doctor, you poor thing!" said Miss Spencer.

"No! no!" replied Alice, faintly. "I shall be all right soon. You have been so good to me. How about my diamond brooch, is it safe?"

"Oh, yes. I'll look out for it. Your clothes are about dry and you will soon be able to go."

Alice began to cry. "You are so good to me," she blubbered. "I have almost a mind to—to——"

"To what, me dear?"

"To confide in you. Two days ago I ran away from my husband, and I know he will kill me if he finds me."

"Your situation is certainly a hard one. Why not stay here tonight with me? Your husband will never think of looking for you here."

And so Alice stayed in Miss Spencer's canvas room for the night.

When supper time came Miss Spencer brought her a cup of tea. Alice allowed she felt better, but claimed she was too weak to sit up.

"I can rest without sleeping, so don't trouble about me," replied Alice. "What time is the show over?"

"About eleven."

"Then I will just lie here, and enjoy the music."

Alice found no time to do any detective work that evening, except in one point, and that one was important.

Alice Scores a Point.

At 10 o'clock Alice caught the remarks of some men on the other side of the canvas partition.

"Sure thing," was the reply. "Where's Tony?"

"Dunno. Hain't seen him all evening. It's a wonder the boss wouldn't give him a call-down, the way he is off all the while."

"Likely the boss knows his own business better than you do," was the retort, and the men passed on.

This conversation set Alice to thinking. Was it possible that these two men could be the two Old King Brady and Harry were to meet at the old sawmill?

Miss Spencer entered just at this moment. "How are you making out, my dear?" she asked.

"I'm perfectly comfortable as long as I lie still," said Alice, adding, "By the way, there were two gentlemen talking on the other side of the partition. One had such a musical voice it was a pleasure to hear him. The other one addressed him as Dick."

"Oh, that's Dick Rashleigh, the gentleman bareback rider. He has got a musical voice. His real name is McGuinness," laughed Miss Spencer.

By 1 o'clock all noises about the tent had quieted down except that one of the elephants which had been seized with an uneasy fit had taken to trumpeting.

Alice wondered if there was a night watchman on duty. She determined to go on an exploring tour at any rate, and see what she could find. Slipping out of bed she donned a pink kimono and took with her a agate ewer as an excuse that she was after water, if she ran into anyone.

Passing along the canvas lane toward the interior of the tent she reached the ring and peeped in. A light was burning on the other side and Alice made up her mind it was the watchman. Just then two men came toward her and she stepped into the ring.

The following conversation caused Alice to open her eyes. By the time it was finished she knew that Old King Brady had been quite correct in his conclusions, and that she had won out.

"Yes."

"Well, did you get it?"

"No, nor will we ever get it."

"Then the child must die! I have sworn it, and shall keep my word."

"I wouldn't if I was you, Rif. What's the use of having the murder of an innocent little girl on your conscience when it can't benefit you any?"

"Revenge!"

"On who? A dead man?"

"Ha! What do you mean? You don't mean to tell me that Gov. Strong is dead?"

"I mean to tell you that very thing, Rif, and Dick and I would be dead, too, if we hadn't both been good swimmers."

"For heaven's sake, what happened? Tell me what you mean?"

"I mean that the old sawmill collapsed while we were in it and went sailing down Plum Creek. It went to pieces a few minutes later. Dick and I managed to get ashore, but we saw nothing of the old man. There is no sort of doubt that he was drowned and his body swept away down the creek."

Thousands Attend Moravian Services

Winston-Salem, N. C., March 31 (A.P.).—Thousands of persons who came from over a wide territory to witness the picturesque Moravian Easter service gathered here today at sunrise and heard Bishop Edward Rondthaler, of the Southern Moravian Province, conduct the 163d successive ceremony in Salem.

The annual commemoration of the resurrection started at 2 o'clock a. m., when units of the Moravian band began tours of the city, singing Easter carols. Two hours later all the units gathered at the home church and about 350 pieces interspersed the responsive litany with religious symphonies.

Bishop Rondthaler, conducting his forty-second sunrise service, led the line of march to and from the graveyard. Five hundred ushers guided the throng along its way. It was reported that visitors from as far away as California and Wisconsin were here for the ceremony. Celebration is a custom of the Moravians brought with them to this section in 1753 when they settled in Wachovia. The first service was held in 1766 in old Salem, now a part of Winston-Salem. Bishop Rondthaler has participated in the exercise for more than a half century.

Wrangell Island Flight Is Planned

"Lindbergh of Far North" Would Visit Lonely Settlement.

San Francisco, March 31 (U.P.).—Noel Wien, whose flights throughout the Arctic regions have given him the title of "Lindbergh of the Far North," was awaiting permission from United States officials tonight to make a 750-mile flight to the lonely settlers of Wrangell Island.

The flight, if successful, would mark the first time in three years that the Soviet trappers on the island have had news of the outside world.

When, according to United Press dispatches from Alaska, plans to carry provisions and learn on the first trip if the hunters require any other necessities. Returning, he probably will bring a load of furs. It is expected that he will be able to clear up much of the mystery surrounding the life of the settlers in the "land of death" north of the seventieth parallel.

Two Escape Dry Trial As Evidence Blows Up

Syracuse, N. Y., March 31 (U.P.).—John Kowalsky and George Martins will not face court here on charges of Volstead law violation.

Lack of evidence is the reason.

Bottled liquid purporting to be gin and whisky, seized in a raid in which the two men were implicated, was held as material evidence in the vaults at police headquarters.

One morning there was a dull boom. Slivers of glass, a penetrating odor and stains of liquor over floor and walls were all officers found when they entered the storage room. The evidence had exploded.

Veteran, Among First In Union Army, Dies

Washington, Pa., March 31 (N.Y.W. N.S.).—John D. France, 87 years old, last surviving member of the first company of infantry which left Washington County in answer to Abraham Lincoln's call for the first 75,000 volunteers at the start of the Civil War, died yesterday afternoon in his home at West Middletown.

West Middletown was one of the stations on the underground railway by which slaves were taken safely into Canada. Practically every able-bodied man in the district rushed to arms when the rebellion occurred.

3,000 Attend Easter Service in Dense Fog

Special to The Washington Post.

Lynchburg, Va., March 31.—Three thousand people this morning at 6 o'clock attended the first city-wide Easter sunrise prayer service here, which was held at Riverside Park under auspices of young people's societies of the Protestant churches.

Combined choirs sang and the Rev. E. B. Willingham, pastor of Rivermont Baptist Church, delivered an address. The service was held in a dense fog.

CREDIT STUDY BEGUN BY RESERVE BOARD

FULL DETAILS PREPARED

Faced with serious conditions in the New York Stock Market and with a rumble of complaint throughout the country, the Federal Reserve Board will open a clinic here today on business conditions in the United States. The sessions will last three days.

While the meeting is pending there are hints from the Capitol that a flood of resolutions, with a possible legislative inquiry, may result as soon as Congress meets.

The Federal Reserve Board will meet with the governors of the twelve Federal Reserve Banks. In effect, it is a congress of the financial branch of the Government. The clinic will study business conditions throughout the country and while doing so the searchlight will be turned on the board itself, with the inquiry whether or not it already has sufficient power to deal with such a situation as exists in the New York Stock Market, or whether it ought to go to Congress with the view of securing additional powers.

The dangerous expedient of raising the rediscount rate still remains in the power of the board. That rate, sparingly used, already is up to 5 per cent. It could be raised to 6 per cent, with the effect of further tightening the call money situation. Such a course, however, would tighten the market for all money, including that used in legitimate business as well as speculation. The question before the board is whether or not conditions in the country as a whole justify making money for legitimate business more difficult to obtain in order to render that for speculative purposes less easily attainable.

With the governors of the twelve member banks present, the situation in each Federal Reserve District will be spread before the board in detail. Each governor will be called upon to outline the situation as it affects credit and the health of business as a whole.

The suggestion made by Senator Carter Glass, of Virginia, that Charles E. Mitchell, president of the National City Bank, should be disciplined will not be acted upon. With call money up to 15 per cent, there is an impression among board members that his will serve as a deterrent and will result in stopping the flow of speculation.

Wall Street Briefs

New York, March 31 (A.P.).—With demand for credit approaching the annual spring peak, Wall street is looking forward to another critical week. The April 1 turnover of funds will be heavy, with dividend and interest payments estimated at $200,000,000. Preparations also are being made for the seasonal movement of funds from the East and the West to meet agricultural requirements for credit.

Eastern banking interests are reported to have acquired a dominating stock interest in the Advance-Rumely Co., following a series of conferences in Chicago last week. Prices paid for both common and preferred stocks, which have equal voting power, were not disclosed, but are reported to have been in excess of the current market.

New municipal financing scheduled for the coming week totals $26,444,000, compared with $61,560,553 last week, but is about $1,000,000 above the weekly average for the year. Among issues to be offered are $1,160,000 McLennon County, Tex., bonds.

An increase of 86 per cent in net profits, despite a reduction of nearly 8 per cent in sales, is reported by the American Writing Paper Co., Inc., Holyoke, Mass. Net profits were $277,933, an increase of $128,161 over 1927.

Paramount Famous Lasky Corporation and subsidiaries report consolidated net profits for 1928 of $8,713,063, compared with $8,057,000 in 1927. Net for the last quarter was $2,737,000, against $2,107,000 in the corresponding 1927 period. Profit was equivalent to $4.22 a share after the recent three-for-one stock split-up and $12.67 a share on the old basis. The report discloses the corporation had outstanding at the end of the year $1,450,000 in call loans.

Iron and steel companies in the Youngstown district are scheduled to start the second quarter tomorrow with production at 90 per cent of capacity and higher in some flat steel departments. Tin plate production is reported continuing on high level.

Wilcox Oil & Gas Co. is planning to construct a new refinery of 2,000 barrels daily capacity at Pampa, Tex. Reconstruction of a 3,000-barrel refinery at Bristow, Okla., is expected to be completed May 1.

The course of business during the past month has been maintained at a high level of activity and sentiment continues optimistic, reports the National City Bank in its monthly review of economic conditions. Manufacturing plants in most of the major industries are operating at near capacity, it states, and retail trade in seasonable merchandising is brisk and employment is large and increaisng.

75 Institutions Benefit Under Duke Endowment

Charlotte, N. C., March 31 (U.P.).—Checks mailed yesterday by the Duke Endowment to institutes in North and South Carolina, aggregating $632,249, raised to more than $2,100,000 gifts from the fund established by the late James B. Duke, tobacco magnate, during the past four years.

MONEY CRISIS FAILS TO HINDER BUSINESS

OIL OUTLOOK BRIGHTENS

New York, March 31 (A.P.).—Business came through the last week suffering almost negligibly from the money crisis in Wall street which sent the call-money rate to 20 per cent, and industrial operations were well maintained at the high levels of recent weeks.

The steel industry continued its extraordinary buoyancy, with mill operations showing even further acceleration where possible. Signs of a falling off in the demand for automotive steel appeared in places, but were than offset by heavy orders for railway equipment. The price structure was strengthened by an advance of 25 cents in iron ore and of 50 cents to $1 in Northern pig iron.

This is the season of peak operations in the steel industry, and some curtailment of activity during the next few weeks would not be surprising, although mills generally have sufficient orders to keep them going at a high rate for some time.

Uneasiness in Auto Trade.

Reports that automobile dealers have large stocks on hand have caused some uneasiness in the automobile industry, but there have been no conclusive signs of a slackening of activity in this industry.

The unsettlement on the stock market was reflected in business, chiefly in commodity prices. Cotton sold off sharply for a time, which tended to slow up new business in textiles. Grains also sagged. While nonferrous metals held at their high prices, conditions quieted down considerably in copper after the recent weeks of feverish buying.

Despite the fact that an increase in crude-oil production was again announced, after two weeks of welcome declines, the outlook in the petroleum industry brightened considerably when the general committee of the American Petroleum Institute appointed to consider control of production agreed to curtail crude output to the 1928 level in both North and South America.

Gasoline Prices Unaffected.

While this action promised to bring a governmental investigation, that prospect caused little uneasiness in the industry, as gasoline prices are not expected to be affected any extent, and President Hoover's action in refusing to grant any further oil leases is interpreted as placing the administration squarely against wasteful production.

Freight car loadings for last week showed a substantial gain over the previous week and the like week of last year, and it is believed would have made an even better showing but for the floods in the South. The shippers' regional advisory boards estimate that carload shipments of 29 principal commodities in the second quarter will exceed the like 1928 period by 7½ per cent. Most large railways reported more satisfactory February operations than a year ago.

Agricultural Outlook Improves.

The agricultural outlook brightened with reports that serious weather damage over the winter wheat areas appeared less than originally estimated. Unfavorable weather, however, hindered cotton planting over considerable areas in the South. The conviction that agriculture is beginning to feel the effects of high credit rates was voiced by Alexander Legge, president of the International Harvester Co., who said, regarding the absorption of credit by the stock market: "This abnormal condition, with resultant high interest rates, produces an adverse effect upon agriculture, the country's greatest industry, as well as upon other industrial and commercial undertakings."

R. G. Dun & Co. reported failures for the week totaling 512, a jump of 64 from the previous week, but 36 less than the total of the like week a year ago.

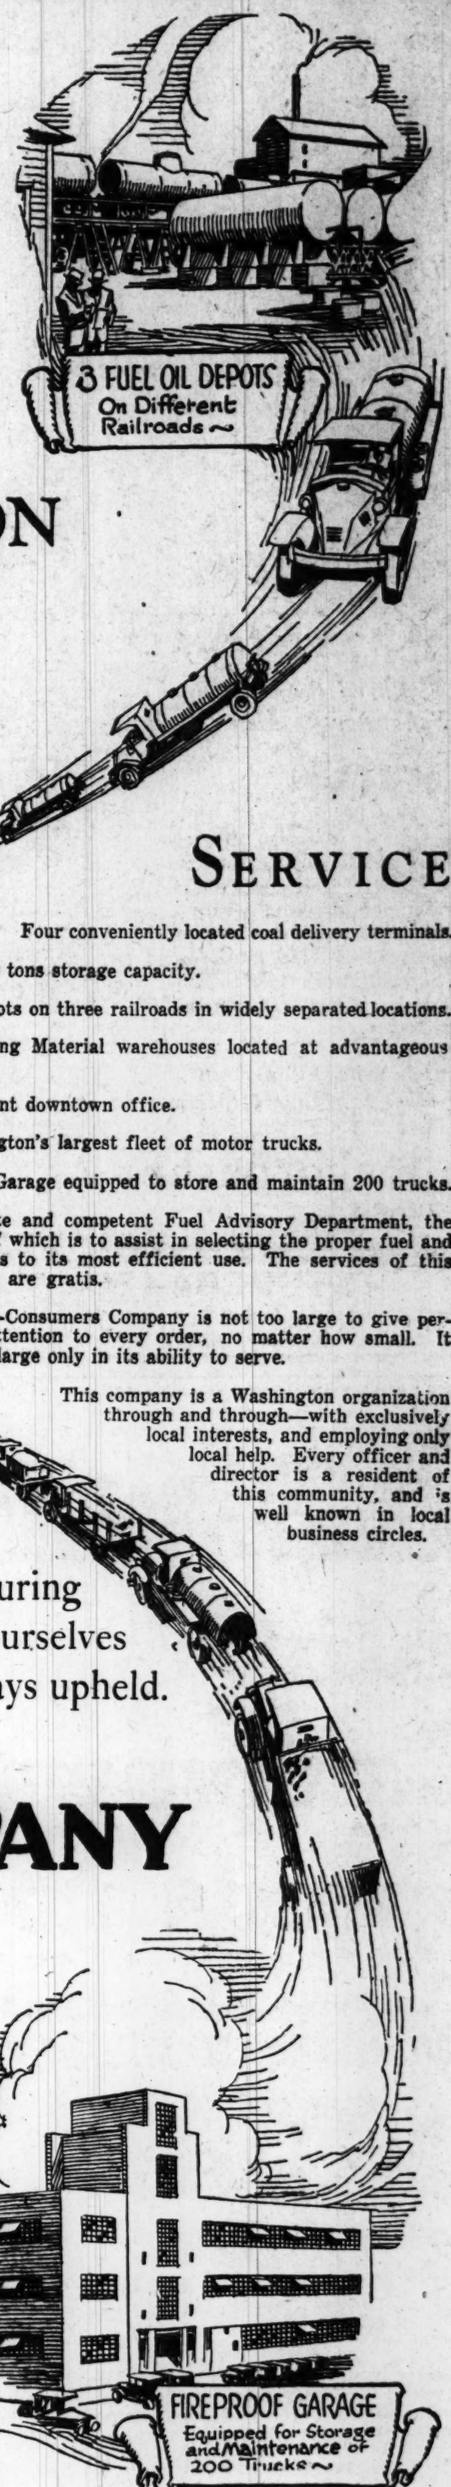
CONSOLIDATION OF

GRIFFITH COAL CORPORATION AND CONSUMERS COMPANY



HISTORY

The first nucleus of the business now conducted as the Griffith-Consumers Company was started in 1898, thirty-one years ago, by W. W. Griffith. His business grew to such proportions that in 1923 it took over other companies and incorporated as the Griffith Coal Corporation, increasing the scope of its activities to include the sale of fuel oil and building material.

The Consumers Company was founded in 1921 by a number of local business men. The growth of this company was phenomenal. In the short period of five years it gained the confidence of so large a number of patrons as to rank with Washington's leading merchants. In 1927 the volume of business of the Consumers Company had reached the point where an increase in its facilities seemed necessary.

On April 1, 1928, these two companies consolidated under the name Griffith-Consumers Company. This consolidation assured their thousands of customers, both retail and wholesale, of a fuel service second to none in any city in the country.

Today the Griffith-Consumers Company celebrates its first anniversary. The loyal support of its many friends and patrons during the past year is a fact of which this company is genuinely proud. It is their wish always to serve best.

NEW FARM AID BILL WILL CREATE BOARD

RELIEF FUND'S SIZE ISSUE

(Associated Press.)

With the time at hand for the Senate and House agriculture committees to begin drafting of the new farm relief bill, there remains little doubt among leaders that the measure will closely follow the broad principles laid down in the Republican platform and by President Hoover in his campaign speeches.

Their conviction is that the new bill will propose a Federal farm board, with powers broad enough to deal with all phases of the agricultural problems and to operate through commodity councils to be set up for each crop in need of attention. A revolving fund of $300,000,000 or more would be at the disposal of the board for use as loans to stabilization corporations, which would be set up on the recommendations of commodity councils, the purpose of which would be to regulate the surplus so as to maintain comparatively steady price levels on the domestic market.

The main work of the committees seems to be choosing among several proposals regarding the scope of the farm board's power. Some desire that the board should be authorized to initiate action to remedy situations it may foresee in any commodity without awaiting the call of the growers and marketing agencies for aid.

Awaiting of Appeals Urged.

Others would have the board act only upon appeal by the interests affected, when a crop shows evidence of price decline through an excessive surplus.

The amount of the revolving fund also is a matter yet to be decided. Those who favor a fund in excess of $300,000,000 have argued that the money placed in the hands of the stabilization corporations ultimately would be lost, and some, including Senator Brookhart (Republican), Iowa, have sought as much as $1,500,000,000. Many others believe that the smaller figure would be adequate, because the stabilization corporations would buy up surpluses on a falling market and dispose of them gradually as the prices recovered.

One other problem which the committees must decide is whether there shall be specific authority to deal in some way with the problem of production. Many farm leaders contend that any attempt by the Government to curtail production would be unconstitutional, while many others believe that a program of education, coupled with a patriotic appeal to individual farmers, would go a long way to curb the planting of a crop in which a surplus already existed or was threatened.

Vrooman's Suggestion Ambitious.

A plan of somewhat ambitious scope has been suggested by Carl Vrooman, former Secretary of Agriculture, by which crop production curtailment councils would be set up in all States where overproduction promised to create a surplus and these councils would work from the governor of the State down through small local bodies in direct contact with the individual farmer.

Others have suggested a national land utilization survey to determine what crops farm lands best were adapted to and one purpose of which would be to decrease acreage by taking poor lands out of cultivation and reforesting them at Government expense.

Both the Senate and the House committees desire to close their hearings during the present week. Before they do so, however, Secretary Hyde is expected to appear before them, and while little detailed information is expected from him, a general outline of the administration's view is looked for.

Safe Blower at His Job Carved on Bank Portal

New York, March 31 (A.P.).—The cracksman now has a lasting place in the city's art and appropriately enough, he's in a bank.

Depositors entering the New Williamsburg Savings Bank Building, Brooklyn, tomorrow may see a safe blower at work with a flashlight in one hand and a chisel in the other. The yegg, however, is safely carved in stone to the right of a wrought iron doorway.

On the other side, the same safe blower is seen in relief sculpture, behind the bars, this time with his head, instead of a chisel, in his hands, apparently in a posture of repentence. The architect, Robert Helmar, asked about figures, said, "I just wanted to see if I could get by with it. They amused me, that's all."

DE KING CASE "SPY" WILL BE DISCLOSED

DEPUTY WILL RECOVER

Aurora, Ill., March 31 (United Press). Attention centered tonight on Boyd Fairchild, "mystery investigator," who admitted he had sworn to a false affidavit to obtain the warrant used by county officers in the "dry" raid which resulted in the killing of Mrs. Lillian DeKing.

Fairchild, held incommunicado, was reported to have said he would disclose the identity of the man who purchased the liquor at the home of DeKing. This purchase was responsible for the raid which resulted in Deputy Sheriff Roy Smith shooting to death Mrs. DeKing, who was buried yesterday.

Smith Recovery Assured.

How much has been learned from Fairchild was not definitely known tonight, but George D. Carbary, State's attorney of Kane County, intimated he would reveal the name of the man responsible for the raid at an inquest Tuesday.

It was believed tonight that Smith, who has been in a serious condition, will recover from his wound. Dr. H. H. Pillinger said danger of gangrene had passed but that it probably would oe several weeks before Smith could leave the hospital.

Fairchild's story was reported to be as follows:

He was driving past the De King home with a man he knew only slightly when he suggested they buy a drink. Fairchild said he told his companion he was not known at the De Kings and that the latter took $5 from him, went into the house and came out a moment later with a pint of liquor and $3 change.

Stranger Holds Key.

Fairchild then made an affidavit that he had purchased liquor from the De King home "from a woman about 50 years old." Mrs. De King was only 38 and the only woman who resided in the house.

This fact led authorities to believe that the entire case now rests on the anonymous stranger who allegedly purchased the liquor. It was said that if the stranger testifies he purchased the liquor in a place other than the De King home, it will be plain that perjury was committed in swearing out the warrant which resulted in Mrs. De King's death.

Deputy Smith's testimony also was awaited with considerable eagerness. Smith advanced a theory that he shot Mrs. De King in self-defense after she had picked up a gun.

However, George Stafford, a witness to the shooting, said that Mrs. De King was seated in a chair, holding a telephone in her hands, when the shooting occurred.

Wilkins Sees Submarine He May Use in Polar Trip

Bridgeport, Conn., March 31 (N.Y.W.N.S.).—Sir Hubert Wilkins and his party arrived today, and went immediately to Lake's submarine plant to inspect the rescue submarine Defender, which he contemplates using on a voyage under the Arctic ice packs across the North Pole.

Simon Lake, the inventor, and Commander Sloan Dane showed the party through the boat. In the party were Commander Fitzhugh Green and George Palmer Putnam. Mr. Lake declined to say whether Sir Hubert had decided to close the transaction for the use of the Defender.

Spirit of Youth Dominates Gowns of Mrs. McCormick

EMMA PERLEY LINCOLN.

Mrs. Medill McCormick, congresswoman from Illinois, was a well-dressed woman before she entered actively in politics, and naturally she is a well-dressed woman today. Mrs. McCormick believes in dressing to suit the occasion. Her day clothes are the best of the conservative sport mode, with ensembles trimmed in furs and smart hats and shoes.

Mrs. McCormick's vivid personality and contagious vivacity are expressed in the things she wears. There is always something about her costumes of youthful spirit, and which indicate one of the most impressive points about her which is that she is in step with modern trends, even a bit ahead.

Any one of her intense activities and interests could not feel the excitement about collecting apparel, which a large number of women feel. Nevertheless, she is always strikingly gowned, and wears her clothes with a decidedly distinguished air. She is tall and slender, with large brown eyes and a lovely smile.

When her children are home from school they are often seen on the bridle paths of Rock Creek Park, riding with their mother, a piquant coincidence that the eldest daughter and Mrs. McCormick are often dressed alike in habits of brown coats and lighter breeches, with dark felt tri-corns.

Although her costumes for regular wear are severe, Mrs. McCormick's afternoon and evening gowns reach the height of femininity. Printed silks in gay colors, chiffons and velvets, often with their own matching coats, are her favorites for afternoon.

One of the most becoming gowns which Mrs. McCormick has worn in the evening this spring is a flesh colored chiffon, embroidered in diamente, with a handkerchief scarf sewn solidly with the sparkling ornaments.

Quest for Kin, Lost 50 Years, Is Asked

Atlantic City, March 31 (N.Y.W.N.S.). Newspapers and the police of south Jersey have been asked by Mrs. Louise Ackly, of Bridgeton, to help her in the search for her younger sister, Barbara, who was kidnapped 50 years ago in Mergentheim, Germany.

At first glance the task seems hopeless, but Mrs. Ackley thinks otherwise. Twenty years ago she received information that her missing sister had married an Atlantic City man and it is her belief that she may still be found.

Barbara was kidnapped under odd circumstances when she was only 7 months old. According to Mrs. Ackley, an enemy of her father threw the infant into a trance so deep that the child's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Ott Schnauffer, were convinced she was dead and prepared to bury her. Before that could take place the "enemy" exchanged a dead child for the Schnauffer baby.

30 Rich Men Insure Getting Train Seat

Millionaire Commuters to Pay $15,000 Annually for Club Car.

Chicago, March 31 (N.Y.W.N.S.).—Thirty members of the millionaire colony in Lake Forest have made themselves safe from Democracy by paying $15,000 a year to the Chicago & Northwestern for a special car. This is above the regular commuter's fare.

Beginning tomorrow morning they can cease to worry lest the Democracy of community leave them clutching the back of a seat or a convenient strap for the 45 minute run into Madison street. Instead they will climb into the shining new club car with the terse warning "reserved," printed in gold letters on the top step. There is to be a buffet, and packages can be delivered at the car all day, and Saturday it will be a golf special.

By M. ROLAND BAGGYKNEES

We came upon Mr. Baggyknees at the corner of 9th and E. Mr. Baggyknees was engaged in his favorite pastime of counting the seconds between the green and the red on the traffic signals. He had this to say:

"Who, me wear Sheldon Suits? You must think I'm a swell. Ha, ha. I can't stand clothes that look good on me after three wearings. And what's more, the boys would die laughing if I was to turn out looking like an ad in a high-tone magazine. You know, I tried one of them Sheldon Suits once. But I felt so funny all dressed up that I sold it to the ole clothes man. No sir, me for baggy pants and a shiny coat."

You did right, Mr. Baggyknees, in selling your suit. For Sheldon Suits are made for men who appreciate the finer things of clothing . . . whose sense of value is equaled by their sense of quality and taste.

Do You Wear Sheldon Clothes?

They're good for you. Refreshing as a tonic. Smart as the little girl in the front row left. And put your pocketbook to no strain at all.

Radio Board May Select New Leader

By ROBERT D. HEINL.

Judge Ira E. Robinson, chairman of the Federal Radio Commission, intimating that he may resign from the commission about June 1, means that a new chairman may be selected to succeed him when the commission reorganizes within the next week or two. It had previously been reported that Judge Robinson, who was chosen chairman shortly after his appointment a year ago, might hold over as head of the commission for another year. The choice of chairman seems to be between Harold A. Lafount, of Utah, and Maj. Gen. Charles McK. Saltzman, U. S. A., retired, newly appointed from Iowa.

A year ago Mr. Lafount refused the chairmanship, but now is said to be receptive. His friends declare he has made an excellent record, though there has been criticism of his voting to allow the Universal Wireless Co., a concern new in the communications field, such large concessions to the exclusion of the Radio Corporation of America. It is understood now, though, that the R. C. A. is soon likewise to be favored.

Stress Technical Experience.

Friends of Gen. Saltzman point to his technical as well as administrative experience in radio, he having formerly been chief signal officer of the Army and credited with being the organizer of the War Department's radio net; also the fact that the eneral's work is personally known to President Hoover, under whom he served when Mr. Hoover was chairman of the International Radio Telegraph Conference. The commission chairman will be elected by its members. It is believed that Judge E. O. Sykes, of the southern zone, and the new eastern commissioner, yet to be chosen, will have no consideration because they are Democrats. Mr. Lafount, Gen. Saltzman and Judge Robinson are Republicans.

There may be some discussion over confirmation of Gen. Saltzman because he has been a resident of the District of Columbia for several years.

The law sets forth that a resident of the District may not be appointed to the commission. However, both the late Admiral Bullard, whose home was in Pennsylvania, and Sam Pickard, whose legal residence was in Kansas, were residents of the District at the time of their appointment. This question was raised against them, but both were confirmed by the Senate.

Couzens May Succeed Watson.

It now seems to be definitely understood that Senator James Couzens, of Michigan, will succeed Senator James E. Watson, of Indiana, as chairman of the Senate interstate commerce committee, which has control of radio legislation in the Senate. Senator Watson has been elected Senate majority leader, but whether he will resign his chairmanship now or wait until December 1 is not known.

Senator Couzens is known to strongly favor a communications commission, instead of simply a radio board, and it is believed will lend his energy toward having the present Radio Commission merged into a larger group, taking over the control of telephone, telegraph and cable as well. In fact, Senator Couzens a long time ago drew up a communications bill of his own, but yielded to Senator Watson, who introduced a communications bill at the last session.

Either the Watson bill will be reintroduced into the Senate, or one written by Senator Couzens. A new member of the Senate interstate commerce committee will be Senator Smith W. Brookhart, the Iowa progressive.

White to Sponsor House Bill.

In the meantime, Representative Wallace White, of Maine, chairman of the House merchant marine and fisheries committee, which has charge of radio on the House side, is expecting to draw up a communications bill for the approval of the lower house. Representative White is now going to London to attend the safety of life at sea conference and probably will work on his bill en route.

As was the case with his predecessor, Secretary Whiting, it is not believed Robert Patterson Lamont, the new Secretary of Commerce, will concern himself much with radio. The active administration of radio is at present lodged in the Federal Radio Commission, but the carrying out of the commission's orders to the radio stations, the policing of the air, as it were, is done by W. D. Terrell, chief radio supervisor, whose department is under the Secretary of Commerce. Mr. Terrell is now on the high seas en route to Prague, a delegate to the International Radio Conference.

Before the commission was created, in Mr. Hoover's time, the Secretary of Commerce carried the whole burden, but now, with divided authority, the situation is different, and rather than try to give the veteran Terrell, one of the two original radio supervisors in the United States, any orders or suggestions, Secretary Lamont is more apt to seek that official's advice. If, however, next December radio control should revert to the Commerce Department, doubtless Secretary Lamont would become more active in radio matters.

JUST FOLKS

By EDGAR A. GUEST

APRIL 1, 1929.

Couldn't get into my coat today
For both of the sleeves were snugly pinned
And somewhere, watching not far away,
I know that two little children grinned.
And I found salt in my sugar bowl,
And salt makes bitter the finest tea,
I sputtered and muttered: "Well, bless my soul!
Who's been making a fool of me?"

Eyes a-twinkle and cheeks aglow
Followed me out to my easy chair,
Waiting to laugh at my anguish "Oh!"
As I felt the pin they had planted there.
Wherever I went their traps were set,
And more were laid when they came from school,
All through the day this cry I met:
"April fool! April fool!"

"If," thought I, "you will just stay glad,
If you will laugh as you laugh today
And never wake up to a morning sad
And never meet trouble along the way,
If it will save you from grief and tears,
And lighten your burdens what'er they be,
Then night and morning of all my years
You may come making a fool of me."

There will be a description broadcast of Easter egg rolling from the lawn of the White House, for the first time, over Station WRC at 4 o'clock this afternoon. President and Mrs. Hoover will witness the egg rolling, but their voices will not be heard over the radio. However, there will be music by the Marine Band.

Radio and stage stars, official dignitaries and thousands of radio listeners in all parts of the United States and Canada will join in the celebration of the first birthday anniversary of KSTP, St. Paul, Minn., tonight. KSTP shares the wave length used by WJSV in this city—1,460 kilocycles or 205 meters. The elaborate program of special features will start at 7 a. m. Monday and continue until sunrise Tuesday.

KSTP was inaugurated on March 29, 1928, as a 2,000-watt station. It now operates with 10,000 watts and daily presents one of the heaviest schedules of any station on the air, including principal programs of the NBC on both the red and blue networks, in addition to a variety of local entertainment and service features. The station maintains a staff of 67 men and women, which is said to be the largest of any station outside New York.

The party will start with a special comedy presentation of the Early Risers Club from 7 a. m. to 9 a. m., which will be followed by a special morning musicale featuring the modern symphony of KSTP.

Novelty acts will feature a special program for the rural listeners at noon and during the afternoon the programs will be arranged for entertainment of women and children.

William Robyn, tenor, whom S. L. Rothafel nicknamed "Wee Willie Robyn" when he made his radio debut more than six years ago, has rejoined Roxy and His Gang, and will be the soloist in tonight's program.

A rose group, heralding in music the forthcoming blossoms of June, will open the broadcast by the Voice of Firestone at 8 o'clock. "Roses of Yesterday" will be presented by the orchestra and choristers; Franklyn Baur, tenor, will sing "First Rose of Summer;" "In a Rose Garden" will be played by the orchestra.

The A. & P. Gypsies will open their program with a special symphonic arrangement of "The Road to Mandalay." Other numbers include "Tres Joli," a waltz, by Waldeufel; "Londonderry Air," tenor solo; selections from "Rosalie," "The Swan," from Saint-Saens, a cello solo; popular dance number, "Seduction," Ganne, English horn solo; "Sunshine of Your Smile," tenor solo; "What My Mother Wants to Know," Nutile; popular dance number; "Du Reve," Malderen, tango; "Dream Boat," tenor solo; "The Mathurins," Lemaire; popular dance number, and "Polonaise," from "Eugene Onegin," Tschaikowsky.

A Mexican program by Countess Olga Medaloga Albani, a combined Mexican and concert orchestra, under direction of Adrian Schubert, and a male trio features the Family Party at 9:30 o'clock.

A dramatization of one of the "Tish" stories, by Mary Roberts Rinehart, who makes her home in Washington, will be broadcast as the chapter of the Empire Builders at 10:30 o'clock.

Tamaki Miura, Japanese soprano, formerly of the Chicago Civic Opera and San Carlo Opera Companies, will sing the title role of Aldo Franchetti's opera, "Namiko San," to be broadcast by the National Grand Opera Company at 11 o'clock tonight. The opera, telling the story of a Japanese girl, was especially written for Mme. Miura, by the composer. It had its premiere in the Chicago Auditorium on December 11, 1925.

Lieut. Charles Benter will lead the United States Navy Band in an hour's radio concert at 9 o'clock this morning. The United States Marine Band, directed by Capt. Taylor Branson, is scheduled to be heard at 4 o'clock today.

Another group of movie stars will be presented during the Warner Bros. Vitaphone jubilee hour at 9:30 o'clock tonight through Station WMAL.

Julia Sanderson and Frank Crummit will again contribute to the Panatela Pageant at 10 o'clock from WMAL. Two duets, entitled "Gypsy Blues" and "Shine On, Harvest Moon," have been selected. Miss Sanderson will sing Gershwin's "Someone to Watch Over Me" as a solo number, and Mr. Crummit will entertain with "Lonesome Little Raindrop."

A program made up of songs by Sir Arthur Sullivan will be the offering of the United Choral Singers.

Herbert Soman and his Roosevelt Ensemble will be heard at 4:15 o'clock, followed by Isabel Craig Bacon, contralto, and Gertrude Dyre, pianist. A merchants' dinner hour concert is to be transmitted at 6 o'clock.

Andy Claus will present his regular five-minute talk for children from WOL at 6:03 o'clock. Miss Gertrude Bolling, of the Instructive Visiting Nurse Society, will discuss public health nursing and community service, for 10 minutes, beginning at 6:20 o'clock. Dinner music and "Amos 'n' Andy" round out the early evening program, with the station returning to the air at 10 o'clock for two hours of dance music.

The program from WJSV will include Jo Persell, soprano, the Bennings Trio, the Virginians and the Honoluluans. The station will sign off at 10:30 o'clock tonight.

Jane Interprets the Mode

New York, March 31, 1929.

WHILE we will have a great many other things to tell you about their superb summer collection, today we just must tell you of a few of the "trick" ideas carried out in models now being shown by the Maison Lenief.

First of all, there is a stunning beige chiffon afternoon dress with a matching cape, which ties about the shoulders. And, if you please, you may untie this cape, fasten the ribbons about the waist in a sort of sash, and the "cape" becomes a skirt panel, matching a similar one already in place on the other side.

Then there is a black dinner gown with a graceful and elaborately arranged skirt, and with a deft "twist of the wrist" the looped-up end of one of these drapings unfastens, and behold! you have a stately evening gown, with train reaching to the floor.

• • • •

And we must not fail to mention "Echarpe," an afternoon ensemble in black, which has a long black scarf, faced in pink, fastened at one shoulder so that it may either be worn as a long panel down the back or may be wrapped about the shoulders as a graceful scarf.

• • • •

And lastly, there is a long black strip, with wide fringe on one edge, which is wrapped about an evening gown to create the effect of a Spanish shawl, yet with a new and lovely touch. These, we understand, are going to be quite generally worn this summer.

Wee Mamzelle's spring ensemble is a diminutive echo of her mamma's, and fills as much need. With one coat and two harmonising frocks, a few new frocks for dancing school and a few summer school dresses, she is again a little lovely lady until next fall.

Send your stamped, self-addressed envelope to the Dare Department of The Washington Post for this week's illustrated leaflet of designs for Wee Mamzelle's new spring wardrobe!

Just Atmosphere.

You'd never guess where I am this minute! You know, I think I had better tell you—a letter from a man fan begs for "more atmosphere, lovely lady, more atmosphere!" So-o-o-o, just to give me a chance to let off all that pent-up steam that has a way of collecting when I just write in-fo'ma-shun, I'm going to start a little "Atmosphere Corner." Any one who feels that same has no place in a fashion column is privileged not to read it. Watch!

We read and hear a lot about transparent velvet in the summer mode, camouflaged, to be true, but there nevertheless. It is quite true that its non-heat conducting qualities and sheerness make it particularly adaptable to summer wear, but the mere man propounder of this theory quite overlooks one important point—that of its wrinkling and crushing propensities when exposed to even the least suspicion of dampness. And, the high cost of cleaning in this country, $6 per trip for a straight, plain, unruffled and unpleated velvet dinner gown and a trip per wearing. Oh, well!

• • • •

'Member a caracul coat we bought about 'steen years or so ago? And how it wore three winters, became the lavish and plentiful trimming for a cloth coat, and still another coat? Well, here it is this season, sketched for you today, trimming the coat dress I am going to have the clever Hollywood dressmaker who outcoutures the Parisian couturiers make for me, when I get there—in seven days, if nothing more happens to this boat. (Yes, I'm on one again—boat, I mean.)

Wives of Tomorrow

By FRANCES M'DONALD

DID you happen to read in this column the comment of "Exhibit A," who stated that although of the venerable age of 42 he had not ever met one woman whom he considered "fit" to be a wife?

Well, the very next letter we opened was from Jerry. And, to our lasting regret, he failed to include his phone number. Just listen to Jerry. But keep cool, girls, for these "I-love-them-all" types are the cagiest of all. They nearly all remain bachelors and die in some Elks club. But listen to dear old Jerry anyway—it's just soothing to hear such words:

"What-do-you-mean, what sort of girl does a man want for a wife? How does a man know? How could he—with the world so plumb full of cute ones, and coy ones, and wise ones, and merry ones, and solemn ones, and dancing ones, and dreaming ones?

"Listen, lady fair, I've been in love since I was 10—with them all! The first one wrinkled up her nose at me and I was a slave. She lived next door and climbed trees. The next was from the city and wore silk dresses and said boys had dirty hands. I never felt self-conscious before—but I made up for it then—and learned about sapollo from her. The next was a cool silver blonde who never blushed and whose far-away eyes made me unhappy. And she did die. After that a roguish smile comforted me and dancing eyes made my heart do handsprings. And then a solemn-eyed girl sat in a swing and asked me if I ever felt that every one was very far away. I was 18 by then, and when I found myself in the swing beside her. I was lots more surprised than she.

And so on, dear goddess of inquiry, one and all that I have seen, dark and fair, all have been for me bewitching, all have been to me the real in this life of unreality; the beauty of this drab existence; the reward for remaining in the fight.

"What sort of girl for a wife? The sort I have known since I was 10, laughing through tears, taking bumps, jumping up smiling tagging along, banging on one's heartstrings. Lord, but they cest me. Their little troubles, and their pouts and tears. What sort for a wife? Almost any one of the thousand varieties, and among them all way I, poor lumbering fool, find just one small one who would have me. But so far 'tis brother and sister each time. They cry on my shoulder—but elope with some sheik.

"JERRY."

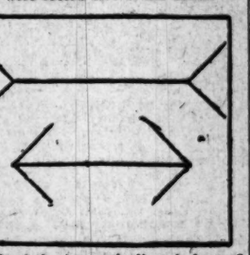
Uncle Ray's Corner

April the First.

NOW comes April Fool's day. It is a time which I used to look forward to during my boyhood. I wondered how many times others would fool me and how often I could fool them. My brothers and I would boast about it if we were fooled only once or twice; but we would not talk very much if we were fooled five or six times.



Which of the two main lines is longer? Measure and see for yourself.

There are many so-called "jokes" played on this day. I remember one in which pieces of cloth were put in pancakes while the batter was soft. Some one tried to eat one of them, and had a hard job.

Another "joke" was to place salt in the sugar bowl.

Those things may be funny, but it seems to me that they are not really good jokes. Nothing is a good joke which causes another person pain or undue trouble.

The best jokes are those which have some quiet fun in them, but which do not go "too far." You can make an April fool by words, and if you are clever you can do it without even telling a "playful lie."

For instance, you may point to a boy's coat and say, "You have a big hole in the sleeve of your coat." He may look with worry and not see any hole, and you can say, "April fool!" Then, when he admits it, you can say, "Double April fool!" for there really is a big hole in the sleeve—where the arm goes through.

I have high ideals of my Corner family. I believe that those who read this part of the paper each day are some of the best people in the world. I like to think of you as kind and truthful. I want you to have fun—plenty of fun—but I want the fun to be always wholesome.

The letters I receive from readers are among the proofs of what a fine family we have. I wish you could come to visit me and read a batch of the letters. Then you would see one big reason why I have a great love for the Corner family.

WORK ON BRIDGE

Mr. Work has prepared a booklet giving detailed information concerning the correct way to play Progressive Auction Bridge. This booklet will be sent to all readers without charge. Mr. Work will also answer without charge any Bridge questions. Requests must be accompanied by an addressed, stamped, return envelope, and addressed to Mr. Milton C. Work, care of this newspaper.

THERE is a distinct difference between making an opening bid and bidding after an adverse declaration has been made. For example, there are many hands which should be bid by a Dealer but which should be passed by Second Hand after Dealer has bid No Trump. Take either of the following:

No. 1	No. 2
♥X-X-X	X-X-X
♦X-X-X	A-Q-10

A Dealer, or a Second or Third Hand, after one or two passes, would unhesitatingly open the bidding with either of these holdings. Both fully comply with all the requirements for an original bid by Dealer or Second or Third Hand; but regardless of his position at the table, a player should not bid with either of these hands sitting over an opponent who has bid No Trump. A bid under such conditions would be foolish, not because of possible loss, but because the bid would be apt to steer the No Trumper or his partner away from a No Trump contract which might be defeated, or at any rate had little or no chance of making game, into a Major contract which, as far as the holder of either of the above hands could tell, readily might produce game.

It is therefore a well recognized rule that a player sitting over (that is, on the left of) an original No Trump should not bid a suit at a love score unless his hand contains eight tricks for a Major bid, or nine tricks for a Minor. It is being a little too sanguine for a player with a strong hand to expect his partner to hold more than two tricks when an opponent is strong enough to bid No Trump. This doctrine applies only when the No Trump is on the right and the player whose hand is being considered will have the lead. When the No Trump is on the left (as in the case of East, South having bid No Trump, West and North passed), a bid may be needed so as to indicate to the partner (West) who will have the lead if the No Trump be rebid, which suit he should lead initially. With either of the above hands a lead-directing bid by East over South's No Trump would be advisable.

HOW TO KEEP WELL

By DR. W. A. EVANS

CURE FOR SWEATING HANDS.

A RECENT number of Welfare Magazine carries an interesting story by an anonymous writer, giving her experience in finding a cure for sweating hands. She did not find what she was looking for, but she did work out a few simple procedures that have been of service to her and may help others in a similar predicament.

Gloves can be worn practically all the time. These gloves can be of some washable kind, such as cloth or washable kid. Perhaps a drying dusting powder, such as a mixture of alum and stearate of zinc, talcum, borate or starch could be dusted freely and frequently in the gloves. She was discouraged from trying a wash of a weak solution of aluminum chloride. She does not say she tried this. It appears that she accepted an opinion that it might not help and let the matter rest there.

She found it advisable to sit near an electric fan when she worked. Whenever the hands became moist she dried them by holding them in the air current. She learned to keep her hands dry by the free use of large handkerchiefs.

The title to the article, "Every Five Years," was taken from the advice given this young lady by one physician. This gentleman told her there was nothing she could do by way of cure, that the medical profession had no cure for this mild disorder, but that he would keep on the lookout for discoveries and that she might call back once every five years that she might make use of whatever had been uncovered meanwhile.

The article opens with an exclamation, "Hidden Handicaps!" It closes with the statement, "and hidden handicaps should be put in an active file, not an inactive file, for study." It is not entirely accurate to call sweating hands a hidden handicap. A more accurate term would be a minor handicap or an unpleasant peculiarity. It is true that very little is known about it, that there is no cure for it, and that physicians have given it very little study.

Any one reading the foreword by Dr. Solomon and following with the story can understand the basic trouble with the young lady though he may not be able to stop her hands from sweating. She has an instability of the vasomotor system, combined with some personality disturbance. If her vasomotor nervous system were better balanced she could have her personality disturbance without having sweaty hands. If her personality balance were better she could have sweaty hands without thinking of it as a hidden handicap or regarding it as serious or anything more than a minor inconvenience of no importance to any one else and of little importance to her.

PUS IN KIDNEYS.

Mrs. M. G. H. writes:

1. Is pus in the kidneys dangerous?
2. Can it be cured by diet?
3. What is arteriosclerosis?

REPLY.

1. It is. Among the serious disorders which may cause suppuration in that organ are stone, infection with colon bacillus and other bacilli, including the tubercle bacillus. Old men are prone to pus in the kidney, due to extension upward of infection.
2. No.
3. Thickening and hardening of the arteries. The sign by which this condition is best known is high blood pressure.

500,000 See Bunion Derby Runners

By EDWARD J. NEIL
(Associated Press Sports Writer).

ELIZABETH, N. J., March 31 (A.P.).—Out of a welter of curious Easter Sunday promenaders jamming Columbus Circle so that even the runners were lost in the crowd, Charles C. ("Cash and Carry") Pyle's second annual cross-country foot race started from New York today and wound up at Elizabeth, first step on the way to Los Angeles, Calif., with Ed Gardner, Seattle negro, in the lead.

The 81 assorted sizes of athletes, after fighting their way through a crowd of close to 25,000 at the start, jogged through the city streets, ferried across the Hudson and pedaled through Weehawken, Jersey City, Harrison and into Elizabeth with almost 500,000 persons lining the 24-mile way.

The swift ride on the ferry, adding speed and cutting down the running distance, enabled Gardner to cover the first of the 80 laps in 1:59:30, with the second man, Sam Richman, of New York, only fifteen seconds behind. The Belgian brothers, Karl and Juul Cools, distance champions in their homeland and both strong runners, finished third and fourth.

Varied Array of Uniforms Add Color to Scene.

Clad in every type of converted running costume, from red flannels down to a hybrid type of silk baseball uniforms, the runners set out on their 3,400-mile jaunt under any but auspicious circumstances. There was a warm sun and bright skies overhead. Dozens of motorcycle policemen, speeding escort cars and cheering thousands, but the crowd at the start, lured by the sight of waving flags, completely upset Pyle's plans.

So dense were the strollers, rubber necking about in a milling mob in an attempt to find out what was happening that Will Rogers, the cowboy comedian, fired the starting pistol at 2 p. m. from a cramped position nowhere near the athletes and started the throng in two directions.

The runners fought their way clear and on to the road to the ferry while the rest of the spectators, many of them still not knowing that the Bunion Derby was the cause of the excitement, headed for cover in the opposite direction, dragging women and children with them. Pyle's graying thatch, thinning somewhat by promotional contact with professional football and protennis as well as the first bunion derby, appeared there grow grayer still in the confusion.

Harry Abramowitz, veteran with Gardner and Richman of the first cross country race, headed the pack to the municipal ferry with the negro star second. Amid scenes of great excitement, the runners were ferried across to the Jersey shore only to discover that one of their number had missed the boat. Scouts found the missing one, George Jussick, of Poland, still pedalling carefully down the cobblestones of Eleventh avenue and brought him across on a later boat. The race was halted until he arrived. With the exception of the Cool brothers and the foreign contingents drawn from overseas by the lure of $60,000 in prize money, $25,000 to the winner, the lead-

Reds, Little Improved, Set 1st Division Berth as Goal This Season, Says Expert

Herewith is the second of a series of articles to be published in The Post dealing with the pennant prospects of all major league teams by sixteen baseball experts of the staffs of sixteen leading newspapers.

By JACK RIDER
(Baseball Expert, Cincinnati Enquirer).

ORLANDO, Fla., March 31.—After four weeks of training, and with less than three weeks remaining before the opening of the championship season, the prospects of the Cincinnati Reds have settled into a hope that the team will be able to secure a first division berth, a height not achieved during the past two seasons, in each of which the club finished in fifth place. It looks now as if the team will take the field against the champion Cardinals in the opening game on April 16, with almost the same line-up with which it finished last fall, though there may be one or two possible exceptions.

More than half of the young players who were brought south with the club have already failed to make the grade and have been farmed out or released unconditionally. As the team leaves the training camp for the North, the pitching staff consists of eleven men, six of whom are veterans who will be expected to bear the brunt of the battle. They are Lucas, Rixey, Kolp, Luque, May and Donohue. Of these Kolp and May have been doing the best work in the early exhibitions. The former was quite a stand-by last year, while Jakie May was out of the game most of the time through illness and injuries, but has reported this spring in fine shape and seems to be in for a good year.

Recruit Pitchers Have Shown Little of Sensational Nature.

The recruit pitchers have shown little of a sensational nature so far with the exception of Silas Johnson, a 20-year-old right-hander from Rock Island, who was not scored on by the Yankees and Athletics in his first ten innings down here. Johnson appears to be a comer, and the other recruits most likely to stay are Ash, with Columbus last year, and Kemner, who did good work for New Haven in the Eastern League. They are both husky right-handers. Zahniser, a veteran from St. Paul, and Gudat, a young southpaw from Dayton, also have a chance. But it does not look now as if there has been any great improvement in the pitching staff.

Val Picinich, the mainstay of the club behind the bat last year, has been a hold-out, but will report next week. The other catchers are Sukeforth, who has been third backstop for two years; McMullen, from Minneapolis, and Dixon, from Baltimore. Just a fair catching staff.

Kelly and Critz are sure of their positions on the right side of the diamond, but Manager Hendricks is still uncertain about the other two places. He may play Ford at short and Pittenger at third, or Dressen at third and Pittenger at short. The last named has been hitting very hard and looks to be sure of a place in the regular line-up. He was infield utility man last year.

Main Improvement of Club Seems to Be in Outfield.

The main improvement in the club, if any, should be in the outfield. Three hard-hitting recruits have been picked up—Swanson, from the Mission Club; Shaner, formerly with the Boston Red Sox, from Chattanooga, and Crabtree, a hard left-hand hitter from Oklahoma City.

Swanson is not only a good hitter but a very fine base-runner. He is the present choice for the center-field position. Crabtree has been troubled with a lame arm and had little chance to show his worth in the early games, but is well liked. Shaner hits hard and can play first base as well as the outfield. Purdy, who led the team in hitting last year, seems sure of his place in left field, while Allen and Walker must battle with the best of the newcomers. The club also has Zitmann and Callaghan of last year's team, but will carry only six outfielders, and it is not certain yet who will have to go.

The team has played nine games with American League Clubs in Florida and has won only two of them. The Reds beat the Yankees handily in a single contest, but won only one out of five in a series with the Athletics, and dropped one to the Boston Red Sox and two to Washington.

The hope of this club finishing in the first division lies in the possibility of beating out either the Pirates or the Cardinals, or both. A conservative critic can not give the team much chance against the Giants and the Cubs.

Fight Patrons Less Insane; Explains Chicago Failure

By WESTBROOK PEGLER.

NEW YORK, March 31.—The opening production at Mr. Paddy Harmon's Chicago prize-fight stadium, one of the new superarenas built to outgarden the late Tex Rickard's Garden, was something 'n the nature of a bust, although it drew about $175,000 worth of business. Under a sane scale of values, of course, $175,000 for a ten-round prize fight between two class leaders, Thomas Loughran and Mickey Walker, supported by a series of other prize fights, would be a very fair return. But sanity has not been an outstanding trait of the prize-fight customer for several years. In fact, he is not exactly sane at the present writing, but merely a little bit less insane than he was during the latter stages of Mr. Rickard's career. Mr. Rickard had what it took to unseat the reason of the customer, and as his influence wanes the insanity decreases. At the present rate of convalescence the customer should become as normal as the customer can be in about two years, provided, of course, that nobody comes along in the meantime who can play to his weakness as Mr. Rickard did and unbalance him again.

It seems beyond Mr. Harmon's powers to exploit this weakness, and his task is more difficult because Mr. Rickard subjected the Chicago customers to just one treatmet in his entire career. The New York customer, on the other hand, was under constant treatment for about eight years and consequently is much more goofy than the Chicago and Middle Western type of patron. Mr. Rickard was not good at absent treatments, but was very effective with local applications. When the New York customers were at the most violent stage the prize-fight promoters of Chicago mistakently decided that their patrons were equally goofy over prize fighting, and they were very happy, indeed, when the Illinois Legislature enacted a law divorcing prize fighting from its traditional legal affinity with the shell game nd the art of safe blowing, although the spiritual affinity was left undisturbed.

Chicago Fans Prove Less Gullible Than Estimated.

Chicago promoters, Mr. Harmon, Mr. James (Moon) Mullen and Mr. Mike Malloy, all believed the Chicago customer would buy $25 and $50 tickets for prize fights having a dramatic and sporting value of $3, as eagerly as the New York customers did. They constituted a fine clinical study in acute bafflement when the Chicago customers worked themselves up to a placid calm over the first legalized prize fights held there after twenty years of illegal prize fighting, and patronized the bouts very abstemiously. The first year's gross receipts of all the promoters in the State, as shown with more or less accuracy by the report of the prize fight commission, were considerably less than half as great as Mr. Rickard had drawn with a single production in his sphere of influence. This might be interpreted to mean that if the liquor business were given legal sanction again in the State of Illinois, the citizens would drink no more than they do now. But it is hard to see how they could, and live.

The error of the Chicago prize fight promoters lies in their assumption that the prize fighter drew the customers for Mr. Rickard. They did not perceive that Mr. Rickard was the attraction in his shows, just as the Rev. William Sunday used to be in his, and that the sporting element was as negligible in the one as Christian piety had been in the other.

I am told that Mr. Harmon's arena cost $6,000,000. The interest on $6,000,000 is $360,000 and the ordinary overhead expense probably will total $360,000 more. When the so-called big men of a community put $6,000,000 into steel, mortar and stone, they show more sincerity of purpose than Mr. Rickard ever felt, but sincerity happens not to be a requisite of success in the prize fighting industry. From this beginning, it appears that they have overbuilt and will be principally engaged in keeping down the losses, as the stated costs of the plant per year will be about four times as much as the gross receipts on the first exhibition which was recognized as something supergala and extra-stupendous and, since the fighters in the main event got 55 per cent of these gross receipts, the work of keeping down the losses probably begins at the beginning. That is comforting, as it is never too early to begin keeping down the losses. Mr. Humbert Fugazy, of New York, has a much better plan of operation. He has built a whole chain of supercolossal arenas here at a total cost of about $80,000,000, but inasmuch as all the arenas were purely theoretical, so was the $80,000,000 cost. There may be no profits in a theoretical arena but the operating expenses and losses are purely theoretical too. If a promoter can not have practical profit, a theoretical loss is the next best thing.

WIN GAME IN NINTH.

PENSACOLA, Fla., March 31 (N.Y.W. N.S.).—The New York Yanks made a sharp change in their baseball habits today. Smarting under the disgrace of a beating by a Class B team in Jacksonville, possibly, but more probably because their manager did some harsh talking to his pitchers, the champs went back to their championship customs. They pattered the ball hither and yon for the screaming satisfaction of some 4,000 Pensacolans, and they did everything neatly afield. The score was 12 to 2.

Which indicates that Master Huggins' talk to his pitchers had its results. George Pipgras buzzed over his smoke for five innings and allowed but two hits and not a sign of a run. Tom Zachary took his aged south wing out of the camphor balls in the sixth and went the rest of the way. He allowed two hits up to the ninth. Then he eased up because he had attempted to make a home run in a batting rally for his side in the first half of the ninth, and his wind was gone. He was clipped for a single by one Pensacolan and a homer by another, and the glory of a shut-out victory was gone.

Dallas, Tex., March 31 (U.P.).—Shanty Hogan and Bill Terry, of the New York Giants, driving in homers in the ninth inning, which brought in seven runs, sewed up today's game with the Chicago White Sox at Steer Stadium. The final score was 9 to 2.

The Giants made one run in the sixth and another in the seventh and the White Sox tied them, 2 to 2, in their half of the seventh. The eighth was uneventful, and the game was even until Al Thomas, Sox pitcher, blew up in the ninth.

Neither team up until the sixth inning had passed first base. The Chicago Club made four errors and the New York Team, 1.

Infected Leg Sends Morris to Hospital

Walter Morris, third baseman of the Georgetown University Nine and former athletic star at St. John's Prep School, of this city, was removed from his home to Emergency Hospital late yesterday to undergo treatment for an infection of his right leg.

Two weeks ago Morris developed blisters on his right foot while practicing with the Georgetown Team, and despite immediate treatment the ailment persisted and brought on an infection which yesterday developed serious proportions, spreading through the leg above the knee. He was taken to the hospital in order that his trouble could be more easily arrested and closely watched.

Dave Shade Popular With Peru Fight Fans

Buenos Aires, March 31 (U.P.).—Dave Shade's victory over K. O. Brissett, Peruvian champion, in a 12-round bout here last night has won the California middleweight a host of admirers among South American ring fans.

South American boxing critics characterized last night's match as "the hardest fight ever seen in Buenos Aires." Shade won eight of the twelve rounds. Shade's ring experience and ability to duck Brissett's hardest punches enabled the blonde Californian to pile up a big advantage on points. There were no knockdowns although Brissett almost floored Shade with a right to the jaw near the end of the third round.

St. Peter's Five Meets Baltimore Champs for Honors.

THE St. Peter's Athletic Club Quintet, something of a stepchild in local basket ball ranks before this season, will seek the South Atlantic Amateur Athletic Union 145-pound championship tonight in the tournament finals at the George Wshington University Gymnasium. Opposing the St. Peter's Team for the title will be the Reliance Athletic Club Five, Baltimore's champions. The game is one of the three finals which will be staged here tonight by The Washington Post in cooperation with the South Atlantic basket ball committee.

The Jewish Community Center 100-pcunders will meet the Jewish Educational Alliance Five, of Baltimore, for the A. A. U. title in the first game at 7:30 o'clock, while the Hyattsville High Sextet, Washington girls' junior class champions will face the Baltimore Athletic Club Team, of Baltimore, in the second titular clash at 8:30 o'clock.

For a number of seasons the St. Peter's Club has been just one of the local quintets. Its team has always been good enough to win a majority of its games, but has lacked championship quality. In both previous Post tournaments, St. Peter's made a good showing, advancing to the district semi-finals in 1927 and losing a hard-fought contest to the Boys Club Flashes last year at the Arcadia. This season, St. Peter's entered the tournament undefeated. Despite the fact, the Saints were overlooked by most fans in the pretournament discussions. Since the team defeated Montrose in the District finals it has been getting some of the credit due.

Jimmy Ryan, Eastern High star, thought so little of St. Peter's chances in the tournament that he cas his lot with the Harriman Co. Five Harriman was eliminated in the first round. Ryan's loss left St. Peter's with only seven eligible players, but the club has not appeared to be at any disadvantage.

The Kane brothers, Paul and Jimmie, and Buddy McQuillan have seen the longest service with the St. Peter's A. C. All are good players and their experience gained in the past few years is beginning to serve them. The other four players have had scholastic experience in addition to their play in independent circles.

Joe Robey played center for Eastern in the public school series while Schlegel and Hickey were mainstays at St. John's, and McVean learned a lot of basket ball at Gonzaga.

The Reliance A. C., of Baltimore, has a light and fast team, according to reports from their hometown. The club is said to be exceptionally fast, however.

The Jewish Community Center will back Manny Goldfarb's 100 pounders to win the South Atlantic honors in their game with the Jewish Educational Alliance Five. The J. C. C. Quintet has relied on teamwork to carry it to most of its victories. Among its stars are Goldman, Schaffer, Genderson and Lewis.

A Baltimore man, who watched all of the District finals and who is also familiar with the clubs in his own city, gives Washington teams a good chance in only two of the seven classes.

He rates the undefeated Celtics of Baltimore as better than the United Typewriter Grays. He says that both Washington girls teams will be outclassed, that the Curtain Wonders in the 130-pound class and the Boys Club Optimists in the 115-pound division will be defeated.

He gives St. Peter's an even chance to win the 145-pound title and says that the J. C. C. 100-pounders may win after a hard fight with the Jewish Educational Alliance Team, of Baltimore.

Spring football practice of six week's duration and confined to rudimentary work will be undertaken by Catholic University starting next Friday, Director of Athletics Jack McAuliffe announced last night.

Approximately 30 candidates are expected to report for the first workout. Capt. Jack Malevich, full back, probably will not join the squad, since he has been working out with the track team in the hope of becoming proficient in the throwing and weight events.

Jones Blanks Foes; Brown Hit Hard

Haines Ties Score in 7th With Homer to Centerfield.

2 Runs in 8th Clinch Game; Nationals Held to 6 Hits.

By FRANK H. YOUNG

TAMPA, Fla., March 31.—Good things always come to an end, and so it was with the Nationals' winning streak, which was broken by the Cardinals here this bright Easter afternoon, 4 to 2, after having been run up to seven in a row.

The Cards played poor baseball in spots but won because they benefited from the breaks and also because the Nats swung their bats as futilely as though they were lilies in their hands.

All told, Johnson's team kicked the combined offerings of Clarence Mitchell and Jess Haines for but six hits and one earned run. "Sad Sam" Jones' competitive debut was a success but Lloyd Brown was hit hard at times and was the victim of several bad hoppers which went as hits and which caused his downfall.

Cards Decide Contest in Eighth and Ninth Frames.

The Cards packed away the verdict in the eighth and ninth innings, coming from behind to do so. Previously, there had been little excitement. The Cards were charged with three errors in the first two frames. Yet kept the Nats from even threatening, while they loomed dangerous in the third when two walks and Smith's single filled the bases, but all were left.

Washington broke the ice in the fifth when Tate singled and Brown doubled him home and this run stood up until the seventh when Haines parked one under the fence in left center for a homer to knot the count. Douthit's two-base error on Tate's fly, Brown's useful out, and West's single put the Nats ahead again in the home half of this lucky frame, but then they quit and the Cards kept on going.

The break of the game came in the next session, with one down and Bottomley on first. Holm shot one toward Bluege, which looked like a sure double play, but the ball bounced over the shortstop's head and eluded West, who was backing up. This let Bottomley score and the hitter carry on to third. Holm was trapped on Roettger's roller to Myer, but Roettger went all the way to third on the run-down, and registered on Gelbert's single to center.

Wilson's one-baser, Haines' sacrifice and Douthit's single gave the Cards

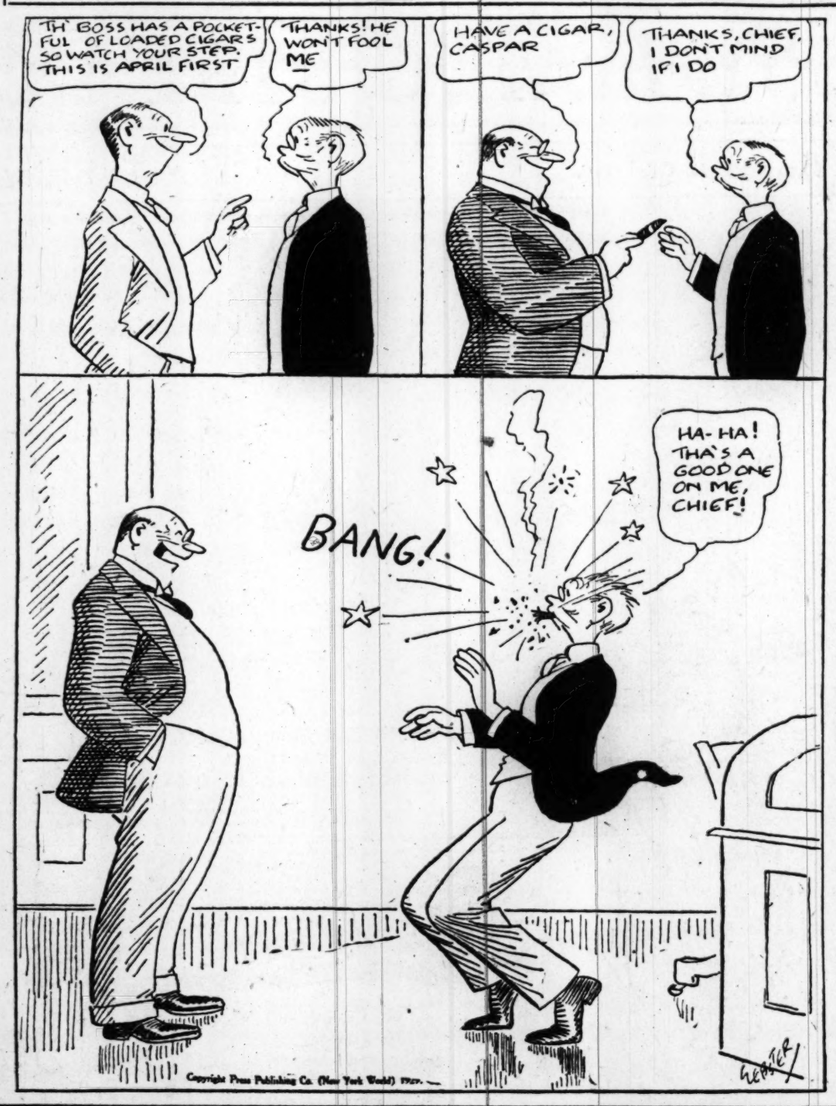
The Timid Soul ---By H. T. Webster



Four $10,000 Handicaps To Attract Stars to "Graw"

HAVRE DE GRACE MD., March 31. General Manager Edward Burke, of the Harford Agricultural and Breeders Association, announces that April 6 is the day nominations must be made for the four stakes that will have an added money value of $10,000 each, gross about $15,000 each and pay their winners about $10,000 each, to be revived here in the course of the last fortnight of April. These stakes are the Harford handicap, 3-year-olds and over, 6 furlongs, to be run April 15; Philadelphia handicap, 3-year-olds and over, one mile and a sixteenth, April 20; Aberdeen, 2-year-olds, 4½ furlongs, April 24, and Chesapeake, 3-year-olds, one mile and a sixteenth, April 27.

The Harford will be the salutatory feature, the Chesapeake the valedictory. First of the big Eastern handicaps for sprinters revived annually the Harford attracts horses it takes the like of Ten Point, Springboard, Tea Caddy, Billy Kelly, Exterminator, Starmaster, Elazes, Flintstone, Noah, Triton, Scapa Flow, Croyden, Shuffle Along and Leopardess to beat.

Philadelphia winners have been Ten Point, Slumber II, Pennantt, Hauberk, Billy Kelly, Bonface, Exterminator, Spotcash Leopardess, Edisto, Singlefoot and Canter. Capable and famous horses that have been numbled in its several revivals since 1913 have been Adams Express, Shackleton, Flittergold, Waterbass, Leochares, Star Master, Billy Kelly, Star Voter, Paul Jones, Flintstone, New Hampshire, Spotcash, Canter, Scapa Flow, &c.

The Aberdeen, most generously endowed of Maryland spring annuals for 2-year-olds, has afforded opportunities for the exploitation of the talents of George Smith, which afterward won a Kentucky Derby and a Bowie; the iron Tippity Witchet; Ormonda, the mother of Osmand; Paul Jones, a destined Kentucky Derby and Suburban Handicap winner; Careful, one of the fastest and gamest mares of her time; Rock Man, the smartest youngster of Maryland spring racing in 1925, also, Singlefoot, Club Steak, Rose Eternal and Click.

Weather Forecasts Larger Field for Chesapeake.

For years Chesapeake revivals have served as tests of the merits and conditions of Preakness and Kentucky Derby candidates. Until last year it had an earlier date on the Harford calendar. Its running was pushed on to getaway day to enable more horsemen to get more good colts and fillies ready for it in bad seasons.

The impending revival, very likely, will bring to the post a bigger and better field than any of the past has drawn because of the extraordinary mildness of this year's March. Save for a storm or so the weather has been like May or early June. Of this good weather Eastern horsemen have taken full advantage. If the weather is as good through the last fortnight of April nobody will have a kick.

Paul Jones, unexpectedly beaten in the Chesapeake inaugural by Sandy Beal, went out to Louisville and defeated Upset, On Watch, Cleopatra and upward of a dozen other brisk 3-year-olds in the Kentucky Derby of 1920. Wildair finished third. Careful licked Star Voter and Nancy Lee in 1921; Bunting trimmed Lucky Hour in 1922; Barbury Bush and The Clown bowed to Wilderness in 1923.

Winners since that year have been Nautical, Sweeping Away, Rockman, Whiskery and Bobashela. Whiskery won the 53d Kentucky Derby after licking Sir Harry, a Coffroth Handicap winner, and Triton, in his Chesapeake. Canter and Display, the last named a destined Preakness victor, followed Rockman home. Rockman went out for the 52d Kentucky Derby, but couldn't keep step with Bubbling Over and Baggenbaggage.

Heavy nominations are expected for these various stakes, particularly for the Chesapeake and the Aberdeen. There are plenty of horses of class of mature years about, but more good 3-year-olds and promising 2-year-olds than racing has had in years. The nomination fee in each will be $25, the starting fee $100. The Havre de Grace meeting, which will follow the April session of the Southern Maryland Agricultural Association at Prince Georges Park, Bowie, will be marked by a daily distribution of $11,000. It will run twelve days. The last of Maryland's spring meetings for the current season will begin at Pimlico April 29 under the auspices of the Maryland Jockey Club, to run thirteen days.

TUTTI FRUTTI PLEASES AT BOWIE

THE Chilean horse, Tutti Frutti, the veteran starter James Milton predicts, will make good in Maryland this spring. Milton saw Tutti Frutti in action at Havana before Enrique Guiterres ordered him to Miami. He won at Oriental Park in January, covering a mile and a sixteenth in 1:43 3-5, the first mile in 1:37 and a fraction, licking Jack Beiner (formerly Skavar) and some others that passed in Cuba for handicap horses.

"This horse," said Milton yesterday, "looks like he will beat sprinters at 6 furlongs and stayers at 1 mile and a quarter. His action is smooth and he is well turned. I am not predicting that he will win either the Inaugural or the Prince Georges Spring Handicap at Bowie, but his opponents in those races won't beat him if they loaf."

Tutti Frutti has pleased the trainers at Bowie. They haven't observed that he is extravagant with his speed, but all are convinced that he will show plenty of that essential commodity when he turns on.

Another Havana campaigner Milton thinks worth keeping in mind just now is Viscose. Viscose, a son of Lucky Hour and Vansylvania, came to Maryland last fall a maiden and broke into the winners' class at Laurel by defeating Danger Signal and eleven other platers in a claiming race of one mile and a sixteenth. He bore the silks of W. E. Caskey, jr. After a second victory J. E. Smallman took him and it was under Smallman's jacket that he starred at Oriental Park. The Cuban race of Viscose's that impressed Milton most was a dash of one mile and 70 yards which he won in 1:41 flat after covering the first mile in 1:38 2-5.

"I realize," Milton said in talking of Viscose, "that we didn't have the best horses racing at Havana, but Viscose, I think, improved a lot down there. He can step three-quarters in better than 1:13 and no distance is too big for him. If I were on the ground I would pay a lot of attention to him." George Alexandra is training Viscose.

A brother of George Alexandra, Bert by name, has brought that ancient and honorable plater, Carefree, which won seven races and $6,650 at 10 last season, to Bowie in fine fettle. Carefree, a son of the unbeaten Colin, trained at Pimlico and trained well. It would be stretching things a bit to say that he is as ambitious as a 2-year-old, but he breaks willingly working mornings and, when a lead is provided, steps right on. Carefree was not good enough to win at Bowie last spring, but he finished second to Highland Chief in one sprint and second to Long Point in another. Possibly he is a little better this spring than he was a year back. March has been kind.

TAKOMA TIGERS BUSY.

The Takoma Tigers will hold a special practice session on Thursday on the Silver Spring diamond, Georgia and Alaska avenues northwest, at 5 o'clock. A meeting will also be held that night at the home of Garrett Waters at 7:30 o'clock.

The Tigers engaged in a practice game with the Aztecs yesterday and lost, 5 to 2, in seven innings. Pope and Clum divided mound honors.

COLLYER'S COMMENT on the SPORT of KINGS

BY BERT R. COLLYER

MARKING time. All fools day is to be an off day for race players. No racing at any course today. The oralizers, commission merchants and bookies will have an opportunity to take in a matinee, while the boys can study up the dope and get ready for Bowie tomorrow. Being personally on the ground in Maryland, I have had an opportunity to watch some of the steeds perform in morning trials. A majority of the racers are ready to strut their onions. The events at Jim O'Hara's track will be well filled. An excellent field will line up at the barrier in the Inaugural Handicap, a $5,000 affair at the Prince Georges course.

While on the subject of Maryland racing I desire to inform the faithful to string along with the racers owned by Earl Sande. The former jockey has his steeds in tiptop condition. He will be shooting from "taw" and will win quite a few races while other trains are qualifying.

CHANTRY, NEARBY and SPECTRE are a trio of Sande mavericks which will run well the very first time out. H. G. Bedwell has BANTON, FAIR ANITA, BULLETIN, CUDGELER as sharp as a tack. Elmer Truman is ready for brackets with CORPORAL and SEARCHER.

Staging two rallies in the late innings, the Washington Red Sox Nine bested the Bryantown A. C. yesterday, 5 to 1, on the Bryantown (Md.) Diamond. Wheeler and Siens allowed but two hits between them in dividing on the mound for the Red Sox.

NAT OUTFIELD RATED BEST IN LEAGUE

By FRANK H. YOUNG

TAMPA, Fla., March 31.—So much has been written about the Nationals' air-tight infield that the fly-chasing department to a certain extent has been overlooked. As a matter of fact, Washington's outfield bids fair to rival that of any in the league, especially defensively, although there also appears to be plenty of hitting power there, too. The improvement noted is due largely to the fact that Emile ("Lovely") Barnes has suddenly blossomed out into a fielding star. Always fast afoot, this former Alabama football hero apparently has found himself this spring.

Not only has he developed the instinct which enables him to judge a ball from the very crack of the bat, but he is a sure catch and his great footwork enables him to go back, come in or shoot to either side to turn many potential hits into putouts. He has a good throwing arm, but not a great one.

With Barnes working beside Sam West, one of the best throwers in the game and a natural born fly hawk, any time a ball gets by this pair it is an honest-to-goodness hit. There is no question but what these two are the best young outfielders developed in the majors in years.

Goslin's work in left needs no comment here. "The Wild Goose of the Potomac" at times appears awkward, but he is a go-getter, just the same, and in the course of a season turns in more than his share of sensational catches. Last year an injured arm handicapped his work, but his wing likely will be as good as ever during the coming season, and with this trio performing Manager Walter Johnson has no outfield worries, especially with two such men as Sam Rice and Spencer Harris around, ready to relieve if needed.

Cronin's Work May Result in Johnson Shifting Infield.

If Shortstop Joe Cronin continues to field and hit as he has been doing, it is hard to see how Manager Johnson can keep him out of the starting lineup. The "Frisco Kid" has been a flash afield in almost every game in which he played, and in addition has been surprising with his hitting, many of his blows being good for extra bases. He came to the Nats last year with the reputation for being a weak batter, but he has shown himself to be just the opposite in Grapefruit League games this spring. Rumor several times has had him replacing Jack Hayes, or playing short, with Bluege moved to second, but Johnson claims that he is manager of the team and reserves the exclusive right to make changes.

Washington's major league schedule at Tampa was completed this afternoon with the final of the five-game series with the Cardinals. Three more days remain before the team starts its hike homeward, and games with the local Smokers have been listed. Archie Campbell and probably Adolph Liska are due to perform on the hill tomorrow. Two games are listed for Johnson's men on Wednesday, the rookies remaining here to battle the Tampa Club and the regulars going to Daytona Beach to meet the Montreal Royals, of the International League, as a part of a "Walter Johnson day" celebration.

The team remaining against the Smokers will be an unusual one. Present plans call for Spencer Harris to play first, Stuffy Stewart, second; Charlie Gooch, shortstop; Coach Gharrity, third, with Pitchers Brown and Jones and Coach Milan in the outfield. The batteries have not yet been decided upon.

An indication of how far the Washington players have advanced in training may be gleaned from the fact that there has been no regularly scheduled practice sessions since March 22. Games have been played every day but one since, and Johnson declared this blank a holiday. Short works is before the start of contests have been sufficient to keep all of the Nats on edge.

Catcher Muddy Ruel's arm has been gaining strength so rapidly of late that he now is pegging to the bases as well as he ever did. This is the first spring in several years that he has been so far advanced at this stage of the training period.

Maybe his designation as team captain has nothing to do with it, but the fact remains that First Baseman Joe Judge has been improving in leaps and bounds ever since he was appointed leader on the field. In the last few games he has played as well as he ever has in his career and has been showing more pep than some of the youngsters.

Catcher Bennie Tate and Shortstop Joe Cronin showed the greatest gain in batting averages during the past week, the former pulling up from .312 to .407, while Bluege's understudy increased his stick figures from .454 to .500. Stuffy Stewart saw action for the first time during the past week and now leads the pack with a fancy figure of .600.

	A.B.	H.	D.	T.	H.	Ave.
Stewart	5	3	1	0	0	.600
Cronin	16	8	3	2	0	.500

CARDS BEAT NATS IN LATE INNING RALLY

an unneeded run in the ninth. Remembering the Nats' habit of rallying in the ninth, the large gallery of fans stayed until the finish, but they were disappointed, and Haines retired the batters as fast as they came up.

Barnes' fine catch of Smith's foul ending the fourth and Jones' successful 1929 debut were the game's only bright spots from a Washington standpoint, although it also might be mentioned that two snappy double plays were turned in, one of which pulled Brown out of a hole in the sixth.

Although charged with an error, Douthit made two fine catches which robbed Nats of hits and led his team on attack with three safeties, being aided by Holm and Gelbert, who were credited with two hits apiece.

MOOSE SENIORS IN ACTION.

Moose Seniors nosed out the War Department Nine, 7 to 6, yesterday in a practice game on the Fairlawn diamond. The Moosemen meet tomorrow night at 1101 Potomac avenue southeast at 7:30 o'clock. The team could use one or two experienced senior-class pitchers. Phone Manager Nally at Lincoln 480.

Almost the Naked Truth

By JAMES S. COLLINS

NEW YORK, March 21 (N.Y.W.N.S.).—Although they are notoriously unable to deliver them, the experts are already trying to hand out the big league pennants. Most of them award the American League flag to the Yanks and the National League pennant to the Cubs. Although Pennock and Moore are still doubtful quantities and the team will start the race with an experimental infield the Yanks are quite generally considered the class of the league.

In some quarters there has been a suspicion that Bucky Harris and the Detroit Tigers will have something to say about the pennant before the polls close in October. The team's poor showing in training season games, the failure of Schuble to measure up to big league standard at shortstop and the delinquency of Heilmann have cooled the enthusiasm of their supporters somewhat.

Few seem to thing that the Athletics have enough punch and staying power to finish at the top of the heap. The St. Louis Browns, which were the sensation of last season, when they finished third after all hands had predicted that they would drop out of the league by the first of July, will have a lot of trouble duplicating their 1928 success. Crowder and Gray hardly figure to keep up the pace they set last year. Nobody seems to think the Nationals, the White Sox, the Indians and the Red Sox have any license to be in the same league with the Yanks.

Addition of Hornsby Makes Cubs Look Formidable.

The addition of Rogers Hornsby to an already imposing list of hitters is the reason for the heavy vote cast for the Cubs. Rogers led the league in hitting last year, but that fact was not enough to lift the Braves out of the slough of despond. It takes more than one man to make a baseball team. Hornsby ought to be a big help to the Chicago club, but the Giants and Pirates are not thinking of resigning from the race just yet.

John McGraw thinks his lads will pluck the pennant fruit this year and this department agrees with him, which ought to be a source of great encouragement to the Squire of Pelham Manor. Donie Bush, whose Pirates made a fine showing last year in the face of trying obstacles, will be vastly stronger in the box, now that he has Jess Petty, than he was last year. When you've said "Lucas" you've just about disposed of the Reds. The Robins and the Braves seem to be headed for the same place they got last year, which was nowhere in particular. That combination of Thompson and Thevenow in the infield has improved the Phillies, but their pitchers seem to be of the dime-a-dozen variety.

Paul Waner must have suffered the shock of his life when he read in a telegram from Barney Dreyfus that he had a bad season last year. He finished second to Rogers Hornsby in batting, turning in the whopping average of .361. He led the league in total hits and extra bases and stood well up in the list in all departments of play. If Barney Dreyfus calls his 1929 work bad, there are fifteen other club owners in the big leagues who would give their right eyes for a workman capable of turning in a similar job. Maybe Barney did not like the way he did his fielding chores. There were times when Waner did not shape up as a mental giant in the pastime. Dreyfus has said before that Lloyd Waner is a better player than brother Paul.

Heath, which is described as "a wide place in the road" in Kentucky; Joes, a hamlet in the prairie wilderness of Colorado, 30 miles from a railroad; Winnemuaca, Nev.; Wheatland, Wyo.; Jean, La., and Hartford, Vt., are some of the communities represented in the eleventh interscholastic basket ball tournament sponsored by the University of Chicago, which starts Tuesday. Forty teams representing as many widely scattered places will compete. Basket ball is one sport that seems to thrive in small towns. There won't be much of a celebration back home if Health wins, because most of the populace will be in Chicago playing in the tournament.

Horton Smith Proves Himself The Flower of Consistency.

Only once in 80 rounds of competitive golf in a series of tournaments that took him 13,000 miles, did Horton Smith fail to better 80. His sole failure was the result of a dense fog in Portland, Oreg. Considering that he was called upon to play upon all sorts of courses and in all sorts of weather, his performances have been nothing short of marvelous. No other golfer approaches him for consistency.

Now that the Garden Corporation and the Dempsey-Fugazy outfit are all set for the outdoor boxing season their only problem is to find bouts that will draw the customers in paying quantities. Neither Fugazy nor the late Tex Rickard was able to do it last year. A bout between Jack Sharkey and Max Schmeling ought to go over, but aside from that the cauliflower crop looks pretty poor. Crowds are not going to storm the ball parks to watch a couple of pansies bloom. The promoters ought to push a button or put an "ad" in the paper or something and get another Dempsey.

SCOTCH IN TIE WITH U. S. AT SOCCER

AFTER two hours of bitter struggling, the United States and Scotland representatives in the local international soccer competition yesterday, called it a day with the score standing 2 to 2. The game will be replayed next Sunday, probably on the Silver Spring field.

The hero of the Scotchmen's stand was the veteran Martin Grieve, who was playing soccer in a fast Scotch league long before many of the players in yesterday's game were born. Grieve guarded his club's goal and he displayed plenty of agility and craftiness in saving numerous difficult shot that the youthful American forwards slammed at him.

Dick Knight played one of the best games of his short career for the United States team. This youngster ably assisted Poole in defending the American goal and his long, well directed boots frequently turned strong Scotch offensives into American attacks.

McLean Makes First Goal For Scotch Players.

Dave McLean opened the scoring for the Scots with a fast shot after receiving a pass from Johnny Malloch. This success came early in the game and the lead was held until the first few minutes of the second period when Gandy equalized.

With about fifteen minutes to go before the final whistle Pete Paulds put the Scots in the lead once more and things looked dark for the Americans when the Scotch kickers continued to press. With only three minutes to go "Brother" Harding knotted the count with a shot from a scramble.

Two extra fifteen minute periods were then played and despite the fact that the United States Eleven had a bit the best of the going it was unable to score. Collins, Gandy, Suit and F. Wyville contributed much toward the American's attacks while Dick Knight continued to be the main obstacle in the way of a Scotland goal.

GEORGETOWN AND C. U. NINES IN GAMES HERE TODAY

N. Y. U. Visits Hilltop for Contest

C. U., in Home Debut, to Meet Drexel Club at Brookland.

WHILE our Nationals are struggling for complete and undivided interest of the fans with their notable doings in the South, yet our college young men are, in their own serious way, making a bid for local attention themselves. Today, barring the presence of that big wet blanket and interferer, J. Pluvius, they will offer two attractions. One is carded at the Hilltop and the other in Brookland Stadium.

The attraction at the Hilltop looms as a worthy one. New York University with Kenneth Strong, who alone is a magnet, will oppose Georgetown starting at 3 o'clock. At Brookland the Catholic University Team will make its initial home appearance, meeting Drexel Institute, of Philadelphia, also commencing at 3.

Last football season you probably read a lot of the feats of a brawny back by the name of Strong, who galloped up and down various gridirons, scoring touchdowns with consummate ease. That same Mr. Strong is in our midst today and you will see him galloping after fly balls in the outfield and swinging lustily at pitched balls at the plate. They say he does things so well on the ball field that the world's champion Yankees would like to write "Strong" on their pay roll.

G. U. Can Even Year's Score By Beating Violet Today.

It would please Georgetown very much to make Mr. Strong and his playmates null and void in so far as their impression on local minds is concerned. Georgetown yet has not evened the year's score with New York University, but dearly hopes to succeed by winning this afternoon. The victories between them in numerous contests dating back to last November will just about balance if the Hilltop wins, for then Georgetown will have triumphs in football, baseball and one relay race to weigh against the Violet's victories in two basket ball games and the intercollegiate track championships.

Coach Bucky O'Neil probably will entrust the burden of beating New York University to Harold Poole, a chunky right-hand pitcher. Poole hurled nicely in the last 4 1-3 innings against Penn State last Thursday, holding the Lions to two hits and no runs during his stay on the mound. He worked himself out of a bad hole by forcing Wolff, Penn State clean-up hitter, to bounce into an easy double play with the bases filled and one out, and also caught a runner off first base in the ninth inning at a time when Georgetown was behind and needed the strongest kind of defensive support.

Veteran Gallagher to Hurl For Invading Players.

It is possible, however, that O'Neil will give the pitching call to "Packy" White, a husky left-hander with much talent, but if White does not go to the box he probably will occupy right field owing to the value of his presence in the line-up as a hitter.

Fred Gallagher, who has been a varsity performer for three seasons, is expected to pitch for New York University. He is the Violet's only veteran on the firing line. Bill Conroy, of basket ball fame, may serve in the relief role if Gallagher fails. George Christenson, also a member of the Violet basket ball team, which twice defeated the Blue and Gray this winter, may start in an outfield position.

A hustling team will be seen representing Catholic U. at Brookland. The Cardinals are staging a merry scrap among themselves to win permanent assignments from Coaches McAuliffe and Clark, who as yet are far from settling on a definite line-up for the season.

Jack Conlon will face Drexel in the box. He yielded but five hits to V. M. I. in Catholic's road game last week, but lost due to a combination of his own unsteadiness and that of his fielding support in the eighth inning.

Little is known here about Drexel. In years past the Philadelphians have not been conspicuous on the diamond. This year and day, however, there may be a different story about them.

Elizabeth, N. J., March 31 (U.P.).—C. C. Pyle's transcontinental foot race ran afoul of the New Jersey blue laws upon reaching the first control here today. The promoter, arriving in advance of the runners, began setting up his tents for the side show which was to have been given tonight after the racers arrived, but Police Chief Michael Mulcahy made him take the tents down and said no show would be permitted.

A ban also was placed on the sale of programs. Pyle said he believed some one played a pre-April fool joke on him, inasmuch as he previously had been assured by public officials here that his activities would not be interfered with if he came through on Sunday.

Runners who arrived late found difficulty in finding hotel accommodations, but Pyle announced that whether they did or not, the race would be resumed at 7 a .m. tomorrow.

BOSTON U. NUMBERS NINE.

SEEKING DIAMOND FAME FOR GEORGETOWN UNIVERSITY

William Forsythe, Post Staff Photographer.

Georgetown University's Nine today meets New York U. in the first game of five scheduled for the Hilltop diamond this week. Pictured above are several of the team's dependables, including Walter Morris, who at present is confined to Emergency Hospital with an infection of his leg, which, it is believed, will keep him out of action for a fort night. At the top, left to rght—Jack Edmonston, pitcher; Bucky O'Neil, coach; Morris, third baseman, and Capt. Ralph Duplin, left fielder. Inset, lower left—Johnny Bozek, first baseman. Lower right—Russell White, pitcher.

Gallagher Battles Weiner In Baltimore Ring Tonight

MARTY GALLAGHER, Washington's leading aspirant for heavyweight boxing honors, is confident that he will acquit himself creditably tonight at the 104th Medical Regiment Armory in Baltimore. It will be Marty's first fight since his defeat by Johnny Grosso, of New York, in the semifinal of the Sharkey-Stribling card at Miami last month.

"I am in good condition and will give a good account of myself," was the way the pride of Foggy Bottom expressed it.

Baltimore Scrapper Improved Since Last Meeting Marty.

The word from the neighboring State metropolis is that Weiner has improved greatly since his first encounter with Gallagher when he spent most of the time on the canvas, finally going down for the full count in the ninth round. But, it is reported, the wise money gents will tie their rolls on the Capital fighter, expecting him at least to win the decision.

Gallagher ha slost no respect for the ability of his opponent because he knocked him down ten times last November. Rather, Marty figures Weiner has improved enough to make it harder for him to win tonight. Since their last clash, the Baltimorean has defeated Battling Levinsky, Will Matthews and Harry Slaughter.

As the Maryland State Boxing Commission some time ago ruled that Gallagher must either fight under the management of John S. Blick or not at all in Maryland, 25 per cent of Marty's share of the purse will be held until a decision is reached in District Supreme Court in his suit to break Blick's managerial contract with him.

Washington fighters will figure in the two special six-round bouts leading up to the feature. Sammy Hogan and Eddie Dowling will meet K. O. Phil Rosellie, of Wilmington, Del., and Buck Zobline, of Baltimore, respectively. Preceding these bouts there will be two fours in which Happy Cioeff will tackle Frankie McKenna and Joe Garcia will battle Big Bill Nealine.

Hundreds of Washington fans have planned to attend. The main bout will be broadcast over Station WBAL, starting at 9:45 o'clock.

Garden Closed, Gotham Fight Card Is Light

New York, March 31 (U.P.).—Madison Square Garden will not be the scene of another boxing match until April 26, when Bud Taylor, of Terre Haute, Ind., meets Tony Canzoneri, former featherweight champion, in a 10-round bout. The circus will occupy the Garden most of April.

"Irish" Meusel Sought By Atlanta Club Owners

Atlanta, Ga., March 31 (U.P.).—President Rell J. Spiller, of the Atlanta Club, Southern Association, returned from Florida today after conferring with major league managers, and said he was negotiating for Emil "Irish" Meusel, former Giant outfielder.

Spiller said he hoped to get Max Rosenfield, who played for Birmingham last year, from the Brooklyn Robins.

INDEPENDENTS BEAT SOX.

The Independent A. C. Nine swamped the Virginia White Sox yesterday in a 10-to-4 game on the Bailey's Cross Roads Diamond. Holtzman hurled the first five innings for the winners and allowed six hits, while Duffy gave only three bingles in his three inning stay on the mound.

HADLEYS TO DRILL.

The Hadley A. C. Nine will hold its first practice of the season today at Eighteenth and Taylor streets northwest at 1 o'clock. All of last year's players and any new candidates wishing to join the team are asked to report.

Games with junior class teams are sought for Wednesday and Saturday. Call Manager Bill Rodes at Columbia 8416 for arrangements.

EASTERN INSECTS WIN.

The Eastern All-Star Insects easily disposed of the Corby Wonders yesterday in a seven-inning game. The final score was 11 to 5. Schneffer, on the mound for the winners, not only hurled well, but contributed five hits in as many trips to the plate. The Easterns meet Wednesday night at 1503 Gales street northeast, at 8 o'clock.

VOIGT SHOWS GOOD FORM ON LINKS

Finishes Two Over Par Despite Adverse Weather.

WHILE the golf exhibition match on the course of the Indian Spring Club yesterday afternoon was too one-sided to be interesting, the gallery which followed the contest was repaid by seeing George J. Voigt, who played on a Washington course for the first time since 1927, negotiate the eighteen holes in 2 strokes over par—a remarkable score considering the adverse weather conditions. Voigt was paired with Dr. L. S. O'Tell, a member of the Indian Spring Club, against Walter R. McCallum, of the Washington Golf and Country Club, and J. Monro Hunter, the long-hitting professional of the Indian Spring Club. Voigt and O'Tell were 3 up at the turn and finally won on the fifteenth green, 4 up and 3 to play.

The outcome of the match was practically settled on the first four holes, which Voigt played in two pars and two birdies. He was then 3 up and would have been 4 up but for the fact that McCallum halved the fourth hole in a birdie 3 by running down a long putt. On the first nine Voigt had another birdie on the eighth with a 3-foot putt. He was out in 34 and would have had a 32 but he took three putts on each of the two short holes, the sixth and the ninth, scoring fours instead of par threes.

While his return was not as brilliant, for he had a card of 40, it was good enough to give him a decisive victory, and while his partner was playing good golf, his own game was sufficient to win. In fact he defeated Hunter, who was driving well, but who was less fortunate in his approaches and putts, 5 and 4. His only real break of good luck was on the second hole, when he sank an approach from off the green.

Out	4	3	4	3	4	4	5	3	4	—34
In	4	5	4	5	3	5	5	4	5	—40—74

MRS. MILTNER IN LINE FOR HONORS

Likely to Be Ranked No. 1 Bowler After Tourney Victory.

WHEN Mrs. Margaret Miltner won the national women's duckpin singles championship and tied Miss Marjorie Bradt for the women's all-events title at Richmond Saturday night, she just about settled all dispute as to who will be the ranking woman bowler of Washington and vicinity for 1928-29.

The singles title was the fourth major victory scored by Mrs. Miltner this season, and her record-breaking all-events total, which she shares with Miss Bradt, is her fifth outstanding performance of the season.

Never a tournament star in previous years, Mrs. Miltner gained first recognition by winning the Star championship, and followed this triumph with a victory in the John Blick man-and-wife tournament, in which she and her husband, Wesley H. Miltner, rolled some fancy scores to lead a large field. Her third big conquest came in the Federal and District Government Sweepstakes, in which she came from behind on the final night at the Coliseum and led the field.

Mrs. Mischow Was Outstanding Star of 1928 Season.

Each season produces one outstanding woman bowler in local alley ranks. Last year it was Mrs. Irene Mischou who garnered the lion's share of the laurels by taking both the national and District all-event titles.

In her record-breaking singles performance at Richmond Saturday night, Mrs. Miltner shattered a mark which was thought likely to stand for years. Josephine Roberge, of Waterbury, Conn., set a 372 record last year at Baltimore, which was thought good for some time, but Mrs. Miltner pulled the unexpected and bettered the big count by two pins. The 375 all-events record which she shares with Miss Bradt is also 2 pins better than the record set by Mrs. Mischou last year.

Mrs. Miltner is now planning to make her season's conquests complete by sharing in the honors to be awarded in the Washington Women's Duckpin Association Tournament at the Lucky Strike next month.

BUS NINE TO PRACTICE.

With an array of likely-looking players in his line-up, Manager Deutermann will send his A. B. & W. Bus Nine through a strenuous practice session next Sunday on the Arlington diamond at 2 o'clock.

Those who will play with the Busemen this year include Jerry Augustine and Cal Hull, and Connors, Hiser, Ludlow, Stearns, Purvis, Beauchamp, Lyles, Travers, Harrison, Sheffel, Lloyd and Nicholson.

M'GRAW MAY USE GIBSON.

Just what John McGraw will do with Frank Gibson, former catcher-manager of the San Antonio team, is not clear, but it would not surprise some of the experts if Gibson got into a number of ball games.

Chevy Chase Student New Duke Cheer Leader

Special to The Washigton Post.

Durham, N. C., March 31.—Don Glassie, of Chevy Chase, Md., will be head cheer leader at Duke University next year, according to results of an election recently held on the campus. He succeeds Spruill Thornton, of Winston-Salem.

Glassie's first work will be directing the cheering in Duke's new stadium this fall. He has a staff of assistants who will aid him in leading the Duke yells when the University of Pittsburgh Eleven comes to play the Blue Devils on October 5, the opening date for the 35,000 capacity concrete horseshoe.

CELTICS BOW TO READING, 13 TO 0.

ALEXANDRIA, Va., March 31.—Before a large crowd, including many baseball fans from Washington, the Reading International League Club downed the St. Mary's Celtics here today, 13 to 0. Reading's thirteen runs were scored in the first five innings.

Leon Riley, Alexandria ace who formerly hurled in the Virginia League, pitched the last four frames. Riley was in great shape. Only twelve men faced him, the local speed ball artist retiring the side in order.

The Celtics will again tie up with the Reading Club next Sunday. On Wednesday the Alexandrians will meet the Catholic University Nine at Brookland.

MARYLAND U. IN 2 SPORTS TODAY

MARYLAND UNIVERSITY will open its eleven-game lacrosse schedule today at 3 o'clock when Jack Faber's veteran team comes to grips with the New York University twelve at College Park. The home team is picked to win.

The Old Line outfit includes eight members of the 1928 team, which ranked with three other twelves at the top of the national lacrosse rankings and came within an ace of representing the United States in the Olympics at Amsterdam. Those taking up today where they left off in last year's competition are Dodson, Crothers, Heagy, Wilson, Loane, Evans, Holloway and Snyder.

The important position of goal keeper, in which Wilbur Street gained all-American recognition last spring, will be filled today by James Kelly, a 1928 substitute. Street, along with Fred Linkous, out home; Davidson, center, and Ady, third attack, finished school last June.

Visiting Stickmen Swamped By Navy in Opener.

New York U., which took a shellacing from Navy at Annapolis last Saturday by a score of 11 to 0, will present Lightman, goal; Schmidt, point; Pickard, cover point; Beckman, first defense; Mayer, second defense; Rosen, third defense; Myerson, center; Arsonowsky, third attack; Kloch, second attack; Schacte, first attack; Dege, out home, and James, in home.

Maryland's interests today will be divided, for while the exponents of the ancient Indian pastime are disporting at home, the track athletes will be opposing the Generals of Washington and Lee University, at Lexington, Va. Coach Geary Eppley's pupils lost a closely contested duel to Virginia Military Institute last Saturday by a score of 66 to 60, the decision falling to the Cadets by virtue of a clean sweep of the places in the next to last event. Bob Quinn, former Tech High School flash, led the Old Line point scorers with a total of 9. He was first in the 22-yard dash and second in the century. Walter Plumley, of Maryland, finished the mile run in a dead heat for first place with Bond, of V. M. I., in the time of 4:40 2-5.

The hundreds of thousands of dollars lost by Washington people every year through questionable stock and bond promotions and promoters would have been largely saved had the investors just used an "ounce of prevention" and made an investigation before parting with their money.

There are fake get-rich-quick schemers in Washington; there are undoubtedly bucket shops in the Nation's Capital; largely because there are people who do not use caution in that most important business function—that of investing their money.

Get the facts before parting with your money. Consult your banker, your reputable investment banker or come to the Better Business Bureau. There is no charge or obligation when you remember and avail yourself of this slogan—

YOUR BOY—YOUR GIRL

The Parent Counselor.

A MODEL AIRPLANE TOURNAMENT.

THE great majority of letters which I receive from fathers and mothers concern, first, disciplinary problems, with that ever-occurring question, "How can I have obedient children?" Next in order come the problems of mental hygiene with the popular question, "Why should my child be so nervous?" Next in importance from the mothers' standpoint is "behavior." And so on down the line to the ones which are asked the least often, namely, "What books can I get for my child what games, what toys, what work or occupations which will keep him happy, well-behaved and purposeful?"

Now, folks, isn't it strange that the questions of how to make a child behave come oftener than those which ask "What things can I give to my child, or what things can he make, that will help him to behave?" In other words, we need more questions along constructive lines. We need more "do's" and fewer "don'ts."

All this came to my mind when I read an announcement about the next national tournament to discover model airplane champions. Now is your boy going to be the national winner in this model airplane contest? Is he going to be kept busy and happy with bamboo and balsam, piano wire, hat pins, tissue paper, China silk, ambroid glue, rubber thread and other materials necessary for constructing models that will fly?

I am quite sure when your boy reads this article he will ask you to write me about it, or, which will be far better, the boy himself will write. And by the way, girls are eligible to compete as well as boys.

But to save your child's time in order that he might start right off in this competitive business, I suggest that he write directly to the Miniature Aircraft Tournament Committee, 315 Fourth avenue, New York City, for his entry blanks, a list of books containing all the necessary information in building and flying model aircraft, as well as some of the sources where material may be purchased.

The successful boy must first pass the contest in his own locality. When he passes that then he is eligible for the final contest at Louisville, Ky., October 18 and 19 of this year. This tournament is conducted by the Playground and Recreation Association of America and the national committee sponsoring it includes Wright, Lindbergh, Byrd, Davidson, Earhart, Ford and Roosevelt—a list of names familiar to every boy and girl in the wide world.

Now hustle boys and girls and your efforts will. I am sure, work me out of my job. Why? Because your parents will have nothing to write me about after you get interested in this contest.

OUR CONVERSATION CORNER.

An Allowance Will Help.

I'll have to confess I don't know what to do with my 9-year-old boy. If I am with him everything goes along all right, but as soon as I am out of sight he is into something. Lately he has been going to stores and charging things to me. He knows it is wrong. He gets the best marks in school, so it can't be the child is dumb. Please help me. WORRIED MOTHER.

Answer—Point out what a queer world this would be if everybody took things belonging to everyone else. Remove some temptation by an earned allowance. Praise him for the good things he does. Set before him the ideals of present famous people who are exceedingly straight in their attitudes. Be more vigilant with your eyes than talkative with your tongue. Very likely the loose screw in the works is in the lack of a controlled allowance.

A Happy Medium.

My three-year-old daughter was taught thrift. She puts all her money in the bank but expects me to spend mine for ice cream cones, &c. What is the best way to teach thrift? ECONOMIST.

Answer—It is difficult to find fault when after all the child has done exactly what we preached. How difficult it is to hit a happy medium in everything! How about five envelopes, one being labeled "Bank," another "Church," a third, "For Friends and Parents," &c.?

The Tie That Tells.

I am a young office man earning $100 dollars monthly. None of my money is required at home, so I spend most of it on clothes. My hobby is dress. My hair is full and wavy. I receive so many compliments on it that I let it grow as long as possible.

Now, here is the hitch—the fellows at the office, through jealousy, I believe, continually razz me about everything in general, making particular fun of my clothes, my hair, my complexion. They have picked on me so much that even the girls in the office are against me. My latest fad is wearing spats and this causes so much comment that life is almost unbearable. Should I sacrifice my ideas on personal appearance in order to get along with the bunch? BEAU BRUMMEL.

Answer—If three-fourths of your salary were required at home you would have a far greater chance of making a success of life. Bank $75 monthly. Modify your manner of dress so that you are no longer conspicuous. Cut your hair and forget your personal appearance. Set yourself a goal of achievement and get to work. Get purposive. Get somewhere in the world.

What Today Means to You

APRIL 1, 1929.
By MARY BLAKE.

PROARIES.

IF April 1 is your birthday the best hours for you today are from 8 a. m. to 9:30 a. m., from noon to 2 p. m. and from 5:30 p. m. to 7:30 p. m. The danger periods are from 10:15 a. m. to 11:45 a. m. and from 8:30 p. m. to 10 p. m.

Today's planetary aspects denote both good and ill. The good will probably eventuate in success of an individual nature, whereas the ill will affect others, those in whom you take a strong personal interest and to whom you are bound by ties of affection.

The child born today will be extremely conscientious and will desire to do everything, small things as well as large, to the best of its ability. It will have a keen sense of the rightness of things and will fight for justice to itself and others.

You are a slave to yourself and to others. As yet you are not master of your fate nor captain of your soul. Procrastination and a weak will are two of the weakest points in your make-up. It is difficult for you to form decisions and stand by them when they are formed—doubt and fear are allowed to creep in and to upset your equilibrium.

Your brain is "a house divided against itself." The hope that is within you visions success and happiness and urges you to do things, while fear foresees happiness and failure and holds you back in a rut of uncertainty. Strengthen your will and, through it, master the weaknesses which mar your otherwise fine character!

You are not sure enough of yourself to successfully assume executive positions. You have, however, plenty of ability, and your ability is not confined to one particular line. You have both vision and originality which can be turned to good account when you are not handicapped by the fear of the responsibility of the results. One of your temperament needs the support and stimulus of strong backing; you need a leader or a partner. You need as a life companion some one with push, courage and optimism, all qualities which are complementary to your own.

Robert Lucas, soldier and governor.
Bismarck, German chancellor.
Henry B. Anthony, statesman.
Hamilton Hamilton, artist.
Edwin A. Abbey, artist.

Just a few of the reasons

Just some of the reasons why a person disposes of his automobile—wants a bigger car or the reverse—moving to a distant city—able to afford a more expensive machine—impressed with another model—or one of those individuals who becomes discontented with present possession the minute the shine of newness has worn off.

Today's merchandising methods has made it possible to buy them out of income instead of capital if one so desires.

TWO POLICE HEADS WILL RETIRE TODAY AFTER MANY YEARS

Maj. Hesse, Superintendent and Capt. Burlingame, of Second Precinct, Quit.

WATCH IS PRESENTED TO RETIRING CAPTAIN

Inspector Henry G. Pratt to Become Chief; Farewells Spoken Yesterday.

The careers of two men, which, for a total of 67 years, carried them to high honor and service in the Metropolitan Police Department, were ended at the stroke of last midnight. At the same time, the promotion of another man to the highest post in the department which they leave, became effective.

The retirement of Maj. Edwin B. Hesse as major and superintendent of police and that of Capt. Guy E. Burlingame, as commander of the Second police precinct, became effective today.

At 10 o'clock this morning, Inspector Henry G. Pratt, chief of detectives, will be sworn into office as Washington's new chief of police. Pratt will be given the oath by the man whom he succeeds. This ceremony, which is to be witnessed by the District Commissioners and friends of both Hesse and Pratt, will be held in the office of the chief of police in the District Building.

No Policies Announced.

Pratt last night said he had no announcement to make concerning the policies he will put into effect as the new chief of police at this time.

With the cheers of the men he has commanded for the last several years ringing in his ears, Capt. Burlingame stepped into his "puddle jumper" in front of the Second Precinct station-house yesterday afternoon, stepped on the gas and rambled away—a private citizen.

While Capt. Burlingame's official duties did not end until midnight, when his resignation became effective, he left the stationhouse as an official for good and always.

"I'll probably drop around later in the week, but just to play pinochle," he said just before the noise of the "puddle jumper's" motor and the cheers drowned out all other sounds.

Given Warm Send-off.

The ceremony attending Burlingame's leave-taking was as marked tribute to the man as was that several weeks ago when he returned to his command after having been under a cloud as a result of unproven charges made against him by a local palmist. On that occasion he was welcomed back by his command and other high officials of the department, the District government and private citizens.

Yesterday's farewell was, in effect, more of a family affair. Every man attached to the Second Precinct was on hand, as was Maj. Edwin B. Hesse, retiring superintendent of police; Maj. Henry G. Pratt, the new superintendent, who takes office today; Inspector W. S. Shelby; Lieut. S. W. Burke, slated to succeed Burlingame, and others.

Maj. Hesse made a brief address, recounting many outstanding events in the retiring captain's service as a police officer. He stressed the fact that Burlingame had given 33 years of his life to the Police Department, and had been a capable and efficient officer.

Lots of Handshaking.

Inspector Shelby followed and lauded Burlingame as a man, a citizen and a policeman. He also presented him with a magnificent gold watch and fob, the gift of the men of the Second Precinct. The fob is a replica of the badge which Burlingame has worn as a captain.

Burlingame was overcome with emotion, but essayed a brief speech of thanks: "Well, boys, I want to thank you a lot for this."

Then, the handshaking began. Every man present grasped the retiring captain's hand, wished him the best of luck and happiness. After that Burlingame walked out of the station house and got in his car. The men cheered and continued to cheer as Burlingame and the automobile vanished.

Other Changes to Follow.

Hesse, who has been a harassed and careworn man in recent months, has shed his mantle of care and already looks ten years younger than he looked the day he sent in his application for retirement. He plans to go away to some place where he is not known and to take a long, quiet rest.

With the advancement of Pratt, the Commissioners are expected to announce other changes in the Police Department within a short time. The present slate for reported changes and promotions is as follows:

Inspector William S. Shelby is to assume Pratt's former position as Chief of Detectives. Inspector E. W. Brown is to be made an Assistant Superintendent of Police. Capt. T. R. Bean, of the First Precinct, is to be made an inspector. Lieut. O. T. Davis is to be promoted to captain. Lieut. I. H. Edwards is to be made a captain, and Sergt. J. E. Bobo is slated to be made a lieutenant.

Dartmouth's Winning Glee Club to Sing Here

The Dartmouth College Glee Club, which several weeks ago won the Intercollegiate Glee Club concert in New York City, will appear at the Mayflower Hotel in a concert Saturday night. Among the songs on its program is Dvorak's "Songs My Mother Taught Me," which was the selection sung by all competitors in the intercollegiate contest.

Arrangements for the contest here are under the direction of A. Rudolph Stewart, and the committee of which he is chairman includes Henry P. Blair, David E. McCoy, Charles H. Warner, S. Warwick Keegin, Gordon B. Lockwood, Edward J. Duffy, L. R. Vermillion and William S. Hoge. The committee has made arrangements for a dance after the singing program.

$4.71 Buys Easter Outfit For Government Employe

In an effort to prove than a man can spend less than $5 on clothes for Easter and look well, Tate T. Hackney, a clerk in the Bureau of Customs, Treasury Department, paraded yesterday in an outfit that cost him exactly $4.71.

Hackney, in announcing his accomplishment, also stated that he was attempting to show up the contrast between rich and poor. Hackney receives a salary of $1,560. He has a wife and five children.

Easter Day he wore a coat owned by his father-in-law who died more than fifteen years ago. His trousers, the most expensive item, cost $1.79; canvas tennis shoes, 97 cents; union-suit, 89 cents; shirt, 50 cents; collar, 10 cents; tie, 10 cents; hose, 10 cents; garters, 10 cents; belt, 10 cents, and cap, 10 cents.

Chief Justice Fenton W. Booth, of the United States Court of Claims, will be the principal speaker at the regular meeting of the Federal Bar Association tomorrow night at 8 o'clock in the auditorium of the Interior Department Building.

A report will be made by the committee which has been considering proposed amendments to the constitution of the association. One of these amendments proposes that the membership of the executive committee shall be increased from 17 to 27 members.

Arrangements also will be discussed for the annual convention of the association, which will be held May 13, at which time officers for the ensuing year will be elected. ENVOYS TO ACCOMPANY CARRIERS PERSONALLY

Five legations—Bolivia, Albania, Costa Rica, Japan and Nicaragua—will be the chief participants. Cases of liquor addressed to these embassies are now in the customs warehouse in Baltimore awaiting removal. The liquor was stored in the warehouse Saturday when representatives of these legations failed to appear.

The embassies of Great Britain, Germany and Brazil got theirs in time for Easter. The arrival of the British and German stock ran the gauntlet of a lengthy reception line of reporters, photographers and police, but the Brazilian truck made the trip without annoyance from the trumpets of publicity.

The Brazilian Minister announced yesterday that his consignment had arrived at 2 o'clock Saturday afternoon without trouble along the route. "Just a small shipment," he said; "enough for the few dinner parties and receptions that we will have before summer."

The Costa Rican Minister said the report that he had received his shipment was untrue. "I was late in applying for permission to transport the shipment," he said, "but intend to go to Baltimore personally in the next two or three days to bring the liquor to Washington." The Costa Rican envoy stated that he regretted the impression had gotten out that he had already received his liquor, because the "dry public" might suspect that he is getting more than one shipment.

The bulk of the more than 800 cases which the British steamer Maryland brought to Baltimore went to the British and German embassies. A small supply was taken by Brazil. A little more than half of the original supply is addressed to the five legations that failed to make the trip before Easter. These legations will send representatives to accompany their shipments back to Washington.

In one or two instances the ministers themselves are expected to take the seat beside the driver. Dr. Manuel Castro Quesado, the Costa Rican Minister, has already announced his intention of doing so. All the diplomatic trucks will be well protected from hijackers and other interference.

Capital Woman Going To Session in Berlin

St. Joseph's Boys Will Play at Chest Dinner

Eight boys from St Joseph's Home and School, Twenty-eighth street and Bunker Hill road northeast, will furnish musical selections at the dinner meeting for Community Chest key men, to be held at the Washington Railway & Electric Co.'s cafeteria April 10.

Almost every agency affiliated with the chest, it is pointed out, has talent of one kind or another within its organization, and it is the purpose of the chest, according to Elwood Stret, director, to make use of this talent, serving the double purpose of enlivening chest meetings and at the same time affording those interested in the chest an opportunity to see the result of the agency's work.

Unwary Smile Sheepishly As Jesters' Big Day Dawns

Away back in the dim dark ages when men were men and women were women, somebody started it.

Every year since that time, somebody has been keeping it up until with the great American public it has become a habit.

So if your offspring dashes madly into the room to tell you that three tires on the family bus are flat—don't reach for the pump.

Or if the newsboy on the corner tells you you'll trip over that united shoestring, don't block traffic to fix it.

And if you work for the U. S. Government and you are told that all the salary scales have been raised 50 per cent don't go out and spend the increase.

Furthermore if your lawyer calls you up and says an uncle you never knew just died and left you $16,000,000, don't order that sport roadster.

Or if you are a reporter and one of your coworkers tells you the boss just said to take a day off, don't start for home.

Now if you've read this story and somebody tells you the fellow who wrote it doesn't know what he's talking about don't you believe them for it's—

Firemen Hunt for Blaze As Auto Rings in Alarm

Firemen answering an alarm yesterday afternoon from box No. 443, South Capitol and M streets, found no fire, but a demolished fire alarm box and post and a wrecked automobile.

Investigation revealed that an automobile operated by Albert E. Gill, of Virginia Highlands, Va., had crashed into the box and its supporting post in an effort to avoid a collision with another machine. Gill's machine was moving north on South Capitol street at the time, and the other machine was traveling west on M street.

No. 10 Truck Company and No. 4 Engine Company answered the alarm. Late last night the box had not been repaired, and was registered as "out of commission" on the fire board's alarm board.

EASTER SERVICES ARE FIRST IN NEW PILGRIMS CHURCH

REV. A. R. BIRD CREDITED WITH DIRECTING DRIVE

Easter morning saw the dream of years realized when the first informal services were held in the new Church of the Pilgrims, Twenty-second and P streets northwest, at 11 o'clock. The Rev. Andrew R. Bird, pastor, held a simple Easter service. The dedicatory service is to be held some time in the future.

The beautiful edifice, according to the thousands of Southern Presbyterians in Washington and throughout the Nation, stands as a national monument to the zeal and untiring labor of the denomination and to the Rev. Dr. Bird.

It was largely through his efforts year after year that the church was built. It is regarded in the light of a national contribution of the denomination to the Capital.

Cost Was $400,000.

Funds were remitted from churches and members of the denomination from all over the country. The building and site cost approximately $400,000.

The site overlooks the ravine of the future Rock Creek-Potomac parkway. The building is described as one of the most beautiful in the country. The architecture is a modification of the Gothic. The edifice is built of Alabama limestone, a smooth surface stone; a single tower rears its spire to the sky. In the rear and adjoining the auditorium is the manse.

The Church of the Pilgrims formerly occupied a 25-foot lot of the present site in 1910. The Rev. Dr. Bird had conceived an idea of building a church in Washington that, through its architecture and the collection of funds for its building, would be a gift of the Southern Presbyterians to the Nation. Untiringly he and others worked toward that end.

An addition to the little church which the beautiful edifice replaces was built by the labor of the Rev. Dr. Bird and Boy Scouts in 1918, when more room was needed and because of the war and a plasterers' strike no other way seemed possible.

Carried Idea Into South.

With the same spirit, the Rev. Bird's friends point out, he traveled throughout the South and convinced members of his denomination of the splendid idea of establishing a national gift here.

Several assemblies of the church approved and the project was then taken under the auspices of the general assembly of the church and carried to a successful conclusion.

Elders of the church are Dr. Henry C. Macatee, Charles W. Warden, Henry C. Briscoe, Andrew J. Kimmell, Samuel H. Boyd and James K. Mebane. The deacons are Dr. Joseph H. White, W. Hall Trigg, William A. Jameson, Charles P. Light, Paul Clark, Lewis Detterer, Walter Lawrence, Ernest A. Golden and Eldridge Myers. Frank Strunk is president of the men's association and Mrs. Felder Furlow is president of the woman's auxiliary.

Mrs. Louise Harding Earll, president of the league, introduced Representative John H. Ketcham, of Michigan, who presided. Dr. Henry B. Wooding, of the Eckington Presbyterian Church, offered the invocation, while Dr. Gove Griffith Johnson, of the National Baptist Memorial Church, pronounced the benediction.

Woman Nominated To U. S. Bar Society

New Organization Receives Many Proposals for Membership.

Although organization details of the Bar of the United States of America have not been completed, the committee on organization reports that many nominations for membership have been received at the general offices in the National Press Building.

One woman—Miss Maude Hamilton Yates, of Virginia—was nominated for membership last week. She is said to be one of the few women attorneys admitted to practice before the United States Supreme Court, and was sponsored for admittance by Attorney General William D. Mitchell.

Among others nominated last week are Madison L. Hill, Milton F. Barrett and Charles E. Morganstein, all of Washington, and D. C. Hanley and Capt. Milton Sehr, of Washington and Cincinnati. Membership in the organization, which has approval of Government officials, will be limited to attorneys who practice in the Federal Courts and to Federal judges.

Thirteen new members will be initiated into the Cosmopolitan Club Thursday evening, the annual stag night of the organization. Dr. J. Rozier Biggs, president, stated the club deliberately waited until thirteen candidates were ready for initiation before carrying out the ceremony.

The initiates will be Robert E. Buckley, Joseph B. Clark, William A. Cantansch, James E. Diver, Frank E. Fickling, E. Frank Helm, Thomas D. Harden, Joseph P. Judge, Dermott A. Nee, Edmund O. Carl, Henry Wooten Offutt, Frederick W. Rade and Lester B. Powell.

Maryland Man Accused Of Passing Bad Checks

Jeremiah C. Myers, 50 years old, of Cornfield Harbor, Md., was arrested here yesterday morning by Detective Sergts. Ira Keck and B. W. Thompson on the complaints of M. R. McGown, of 1336 I street northwest, and George Grimmel, 127 Carroll street southeast, charged with passing worthless checks.

Myers, police said, is alleged to have given worthless checks for $80 to a Washington Hotel, represented by McGown, and for $10 to Grimmel. He was released under $2,000 bond.

THE NEW WEEK'S BILLS

FOX

"HEARTS IN DIXIE." Fox all-talking, all-singing, all-dancing production, with all-colored cast and Billbrew chorus of 60, under the direction of Paul Sloane. Reviewed Sunday afternoon.

By NELSON B. BELL.

While I should hesitate to make a box-office prediction as to the future of this type of production, if the highest function of the modern screen, like that of the stage, is to chronicle some believable aspect of actual life, then "Hearts in Dixie" must be written down as a masterpiece of vivid realism.

The story, made audible as well as visible, reflects high credit upon Walter Weems, its principal author, who is said to have been assisted in his task by Mr. Sloane, the director, and A. H. Van Buren, a former Washington stock favorite, in that it makes no attempt to compile a tedious succession of dramatic complications but is content to trace only the salient events in a little community of cotton field negroes. The pastimes of a simple race are pictured with the same minute fidelity that is brought to bear in the depiction of the sorrows that enter their lives and arouse the superstitions that are futile substitutes for medical practitioners above the level of the voodoo doctor.

The two threads of narrative that may be said to pursue some approximation of continuity are those of "Pappy" Nappus and the little boy Chinquapin, and the marital exploits of "Gummy," the laziest man in the settlement, the death of whose wife and baby brings poignant grief to every one but him. It is notable that throughout the action, comedy and pathos have been balanced with extraordinary skill and without at all impairing the naturalness of the activities in which the members of the ensemble are engaged.

The presence of Stepin Fetchit in the cast in the role of "Gummy," is probably the most stressed of any, but it is Clarence Muse, as Nappus, who bears the burden of the play's more serious moments. Here is an actor whose richness of voice, emotional grasp and quiet power equip him well for tasks of importance in the theater. Mr. Fetchit, to be sure, is not to be passed by lightly. His is an unerring comedy sense in reading lines and multiplying their humor, in addition to which he is a dancer that can pick 'em up and lay 'em down in most amazing fashion.

To all that transpires upon the screen, the Billbrew chorus of 60 mixed voices furnishes a melodious background. The more familiar of the songs of the South and negro spirituals are the melodies to which they turn the mellowness and beauty of their harmonious voices.

Among the members of the cast who contribute commendable performances should be mentioned Eugene Jackson, as Chinquapin; Bernice Pilot, as Chloe; Vivian Smith, as Violet; little Dorothy Morrison, as 'Melia, and A. C. H. Billbrew, as the voodoo woman.

A new master of ceremonies in the person of John Irving Fisher takes command of the stage portion of the bill and does a deft and efficient job of it. Mr. Fisher is a young man with a personality and a sense of humor who does not imitate but nevertheless suggests Frank Fay in manner. The Happy-Go-Lucky Boys and Bobby Pincus stood out among those introduced and so did Florence Forman, an Evelyn Law dancer. The others included Allyn Reese, contralto; Shelton and Cinns, acrobatic dancers, and Trixie Hicks and Peggy Hart, soubrettes. The Foxettes, with many new faces, clicked.

The Fox Movietone News and the colored fashion reel, together with Mr. Brusiloff's well played 'Southern Rhapsody," by Hosmer, rounded out another trail-blazing entertainment.

PALACE

Were it not for the assurance prefacing William Haines' latest stellar offering that it is adapted from a Saturday Evening Post story of Lucian Cary's, the obvious conclusion would be that a studio scenarist had been instructed to run off scenario No. 16 from the standard Haines formula. There is nothing about the picture to distinguish it from the star's usual output, unless it be that it is more trivial than has sometimes been the case and at the same time less humorous.

The truth is that the original fresh boy seems to be growing a little wearied himself with his freshness. His store of tricks is still with him, but he parades them with less spontaneity than of yore and with a suspiciously wistful expression peeping through the giddy whirl of his antics. Perhaps it is the imminent session in the ring with the professional Jack Roper that haunts his thoughts. A legitimate cause for dampened spirits, this last, to judge from Mr. Roper's fists in action.

It should be stated that William is here a prize fighter, the different kind, with a millionaire father. Lured back to the classroom he has deserted by an overwhelming taste for a coed who has snubbed him on the train, he leads the triple life of a student-pugilist-lover until the night of the big fight, when he almost loses—you know how those things go—but doesn't.

In spite of an unfailing conviction, based on William's previous athletic contests, that he will win out in the end, the fight is the most exciting and well-done incident in the picture. Huge throngs in the stadium lend authentic background to the spectacle and the radio description reaching the students back at Sierra brings with it a feeling of reality. The rest of the footage devotes itself to flaming youth in the process of acquiring knowledge and to William in the process of acquiring Joan Crawford. Joan does well enough with what she has to do, but Karl Dane is of small consequence in a role that fails to matter.

A short subject of sufficient gravity to balance nicely with the feature film sets forth the tragic tale of Mme. du Barry in an interesting, if slightly different, version. Done in technicolor, it is a gorgeous thing to look upon, and it brings back our long-lost and almost forgotten friend, Priscilla Dean.

The newsreels round out the screen entertainment, leaving room for an orchestral prelude and the stage revue, the latter taking on the aspects of a welcome-home celebration for Wesley Eddy. Jean Boydell, comedienne, was the audience's favorite Saturday night, though Bud Carlell, roper-monologist; Marie White, toe dancer, and Osaman and Schepp, banjoists, won their following, too. The Bachelor Four Quartet, the Gould-Sorel Girls and the syncopators complete the entertainment before a background worthy of the title, "Rainbow Trail."

COLUMBIA

In rigging up the dramatic framework of what M-G-M accurately describes as the first all-talking, all-dancing, all-singing picture, Edmund Goulding, author, evidently gathered together from memory of his own days as a trouper all of the devices known to be cure-fire in audience appeal. The result is a fast-moving combination of familiar comedy "gags," trite dramatic situations and a reasonable amount of "hokum" that takes on an immediate gloss of brand-new cleverness by reason of the novelty of the medium through which it is presented. It might be catalogued as a negligible bit of drama, but a tremendously effective piece of smart showmanship.

The more violently the spectator has been stagestruck and the more fascinating back-stage life seems to him, the greater will be his reaction to the specious business that reveals itself during the extensive footage of this carnival of heartache and whoopee. The story is the old one of the "sister act," in which one girl is the self-sacrificing guardian of her beautiful but dumb young partner. Thrown about the two are the usual perplexities that confront a couple of small-time artistes endeavoring to crash the big time and Zanfield's gorgeous new production of "The Broadway Melody," plus the complications that ensue when a popular male star decides that he loves the kid sister after having devoted much of his life to convincing the elder and more competent she is the one. Incidental to these major considerations are the rehearsal scenes and finished performance of the big revue, a part of which is visualized with opulent splendor in natural colors.

As a wholly articulate production, "The Broadway Melody" is deficient only when it attempts to go further than other all-talkies have gone by reproducing a complete musical revue. The unfortunate limitations of camera lines in these sequences result in a miniature spectacle that seems to occupy a stage about 10 feet wide, thus largely vitiating the intended effect.

It would be something less than justice not to say that the whole pith and substance of the plot centers in the character of "Hank" Mahoney, elder of the sister act, played by Bessie Love. Bessie Love was never quite beautiful enough to get up there among the stars at Hollywood, although she could always act rings around most of them. In this subject she proves it. Her performance is perfect. Anita Page, as "Queenie," the other half of the act, lacks both the natural endowment and the experience of Miss Love, but nevertheless acquits herself with sufficient credit to preserve the remarkably high standard of a uniformly capable ensemble. Charles King, for years the vaudeville partner of Elizabeth Brice, is splendidly cast as the vacillating lover, and Kenneth Thomson, as the menace, and Eddie Kane, another stage veteran, who offers a keen travesty of a noted revue producer in the transparent role of "Zanfield," know their way around backstage. Jed Prouty, who sang "On the Banks of the Saskatchewan" as long ago as "The Pink Lady," is fine as the stuttering booking agent.

"Confession," a short-reel, all-talkie playlet directed by Lionel Barrymore, is the foremost of the auxiliaries. It relates the ironic story of a murderer in the A. E. F., whose confession fell upon the uncomprehending ears of two French women. Robert Ames and Carroll Nye lead the cast.

The M-G-M and Fox Movietone Newsreels and overture complete an entertainment you will not care to miss.

EARLE

This film is taken from a $10,000 prize story, they tell us, a story by youth, for youth, and with youth. Oh, very well. Youth is probably a little loose with figures, and the valuation may as well be accepted. Youthful ideas of the value of money seem to be what the story is about, and the presumably juvenile author is apparently as much at a loss as his ingenuous heroine.

As a study in Dorothy Mackaill, her charming personality and her manifold points of beauty, the picture is a grand success. There is nothing inconsiderable about Dorothy. But the part that she plays, a jazz-ridden, sex-foolish daughter of wealth, is about as inconsequential a creature as the advancing hordes of youth have to offer.

This young woman opens the tale by deliberately picking, for purely petting purposes, on her father's handsome new chauffeur, who of course is the sturdy Jack Mulhall. By cave-man methods he wins such heart as she possesses, and when her father loses his fortune and the chauffeur wins $50,000 on a horse race, she does nothing in the world but marry him. Now, on this $50,000—mark the figure—they set up at the Ritz-Carlton, and he is obliged to limit her to $4,000 a year for clothes. She spends this allowance on one fur coat, and trouble begins. The practical-minded chauffeur seems dimly to suspect that the budget is not precisely well-balanced, so he starts driving a taxi of evenings, between parties, without telling any one. Unhappily he picks up for a fare the hated rival, who evilly tells on him, thinking to profit by his terrible degradation. But the little wife's heart of gold responds to the sacrifice, and she pursues her husband's taxi through the thick of traffic to a joyful ending.

Well directed in detail, the picture contains plenty of allurement for those who are specially interested in handsome and fashionable clothing, and who can still find a thrill in pictured scenes of cabaret gayety. This is furnished in several varieties, including the Harlem and chop-suey brands. Miss Mackaill herself contributes some lively dancing.

In second place on the bill is a Paramount all-talking comedy called "Post-Mortems," in which Raymond Griffith as a husky-voiced burglar invades the apartment of a couple who are at daggers' points over a bridge game. With the aid of his pal the invader gives the pair some lessons in the game and effects a reconciliation. Griffith is one comedian who is not damaged by talking.

METROPOLITAN

"THE DIVINE LADY." A First National sound-picture with songs, but no dialogue, starring Corinne Griffith, supported by Victor Varconi and H. B. Warner. Adapted from the novel by E. Barrington and directed by Frank Lloyd. Reviewed Saturday night.

Twenty-four hours after having viewed this admirable picturization of the E. Barrington novel, the impression still remains that it subordinates the concerns of individuals to the destinies of nations and so dwarfs its gallery of character portrayals, impressively limned as they are, by the fabulous circumstances and conditions that surround them. Frank Lloyd, who proved his mastery of sweeping effect in "The Sea Hawk," in his direction of this subject seems again to have succumbed to the heroics of his story's period rather than to the romanticism and comparatively petty interests of his pivotal figures.

"The Divine Lady" affords Corinne Griffith probably as fine a vehicle as she has had since First National launched her as a star in "Black Oxen." The role of the cook's daughter, who became Lady Hamilton and then the supreme love of England's mightiest warrior of the sea, affords a wider range of expression and a more completely rounded character study than Miss Griffith is accustomed to essay in a single picture. The gradations that mark her development from hoyden to a power at the court of Naples are perhaps a little too hurriedly accomplished, in order that Mr. Lloyd may get to his sea fights, but all things considered, I do not recall a more commendable endeavor on the part of this screen beauty than her present.

Two sterling male performances bulwark the versatile delineation of the star—one by H. B. Warner, as Sir William Hamilton, who had the good judgment to pay no heed to ugly rumors "because they might be true;" the other by Victor Varconi, cast as Lord Nelson, willing to sacrifice everything but his allegiance to the British flag for the love of a woman who had no more right to bestow it upon him than he to receive it. Varconi does not fulfill my conception of the hero of the Nile and Trafalgar in several of his physical aspects, but in the face of so excellent a performance as he offers such objection is captious.

Ian Keith, who has lost much of his polish and a deal of his finesse since the days when he imitated the Barrymore manner and style in collars; Marie Dressler, Dorothy Cumming, Michael Vavitch, Helen Jerome Eddy, William Conklin, Montagu Love and William Leigh are conspicuous in a supporting cast that often is lost in a battling ensemble of thousands.

The scenes of ocean conflict are marvels of sustained tumult, possessing depth and every semblance of actuality, save in the single matter of audibility. The recorded sound is by far too feeble to be commensurate with Franco-British naval combat on so huge a scale.

The movement of the narrative progresses from the simple English countryside to the court of Naples, through the thrilling periods of Nelson's fights with the French fleet, back to the gala days of the hero's
